Bobby Brown Scores Only Run in Fourth As Jim Konstanty Drops 5-Hit Game

By Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4. Big Vic Raschi whizzed his fast ball past the Phillies' Whiz Kids today with a fancy two-hitter that delivered the opening game of the World Series to the Yankees by the classic score of 1 to 0.

With each rise and dip of his pitching arm, the husky Yankee righthander transformed this city's festive World Series mood into glum apprehension and left 30,746 Shibe Park fans in dismay.

So complete was his job against the Phillies, only three of them reached base all afternoon, and only one of the Whiz Kids saw second base. Raschi outpitched Jim Konstanty, who gave a lustrous four-hit performance himself but was doomed from the moment the Yankees got Raschi a run.

The Yankees got Raschi the winning run in the fourth inning, off the bats of Bobby Brown, Hank Bauer and Gerry Coleman in the lower end of their order. It was launched by Brown's double to left, a typical Bobby Brown move, and he moved to third base on Hank Bauer's deep fly to center with one out.

Home on Coleman's Fly. Konstanty, who twice previously had turned back Yankee threats with runners on third and only one out, couldn't escape this time. Gerry Coleman floated a deep fly to Dick Sisler in left and Brown romped home after the catch with the run that won the ball game.

The two teams were playing before an attendance nearly 4000 below capacity and the game produced a mystery of the missing fans, with large vacant blocks of seats in many sections despite the fact that all tickets had been sold.

Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phils was roundly vindicated by his choice of Konstanty, his relief ace, as a starting pitcher despite the Whiz Kids' defeat. The 33-year-old righthander moved easily into his starting role and gave Raschi a superb duel of it until he was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

Tomorrow, Sawyer will attempt to even the series by starting young Robin Roberts, his lone 20-game winner who was the hero of the pennant victory over the Dodgers. The Yankees will counter with another of their series-seasoned fast-balling righthanders, Allie Reynolds.

Today, Raschi was pitching the twelfth two-hitter in the 46 years of World Series history, and it was the third successive 1-0 game in a series opener. The Yankees' Reynolds beat the Dodgers by that score last October.

On the few occasions when he was behind the count on the Phillies' hitters, Raschi merely bent more stuff into his best pitch, his hard one, and ended

Comptroller's Ruling Sets Out Limitations on Federal Jobs

By Jerry Klutz

Comptroller General Lindsey C. Warren yesterday cleared up several disputed points on the Whitten rider, that puts most Federal personnel actions on a temporary basis, by ruling:

1. That an employee who was laid off in a reduction of force after September 1 can't be reinstated to a grade above the grade he held on that date;

2. But if he is reinstated, it must be on a temporary basis, and he can be promoted to a higher position within a reasonable length of time;

3. That any other type of reinstatement may be made at any grade for which the employee meets qualification requirements laid down by Civil Service;

4. That an employee who was "reduced in force" after September 1 can be placed in a defense job not to exceed the grade and salary he held on September 1, no matter whether he had been demoted or promoted after that date. The same person could be appointed to a non-defense job at a salary to include any promotion he may have received after September 1; and finally, the comptroller ruled,

5. That a former employee who was separated by reduction in force prior to September 1 may be reinstated or appointed to a grade higher than the grade he last held.

It's obvious that the Whitten rider, as interpreted by the comptroller, discriminates against those unfortunate persons who in reduction of force are laid off after September 1. Employees who either have or will resign after that date, for example, can be reinstated at higher grades.

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission yesterday issued its

Truman Wouldn't Name Lewis Dog Catcher, He Wrote in 1949

DENVER, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—A letter in which President Truman turned down a proposal that he appoint John L. Lewis ambassador to Moscow a year and a half ago came to light today. Mr. Truman wrote he wouldn't consider Lewis for the job of dog catcher.

The President's letter, dated May 5, 1949, was addressed to a Colorado State Senator who had written Mr. Truman urging that the United Mine Workers union chief be named to the diplomatic job.

Senator Neal Bishop of Denver wrote Mr. Truman that Lewis' appointment would have the following advantages:

"Our Lewis would have a more formidable appearance than Stalin, roar 'No' louder than Gromyko, hurl more choice invectives

Formosa Study Urged By Acheson

U. N. Group Might Conduct On-Spot Inquiry, Even on Mainland, He Says

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 4.

(NYHT)—Secretary of State Acheson today said he hoped the United Nations General Assembly would create a special group to investigate and solve the future status of Formosa, now held by the Chinese Nationalists.

Asked at a press conference whether such a group might carry on its studies on the spot in Formosa or even on the Communist-held Chinese mainland, Secretary Acheson said it might—if the Assembly considered this necessary.

Indications were that the long-secret American plan for a peaceful solution in Formosa—a plan that Secretary Acheson laughingly characterized as a trade secret—would be simply creation of a U. N. commission, authorized to work wherever it deemed necessary.

Committee Meets Today

The Assembly's general committee is to meet Thursday to take up the American proposal for an Assembly study of Formosa, after a delay won earlier by Chinese Nationalist Ambassador Tingfu F. Tsiang to get instructions.

Both the Chinese Nationalists and Communists have hitherto held that Formosa was finally handed over to China under a 1943 American-British-Chinese declaration at Cairo and in 1945 Japanese surrender terms.

Meantime, Secretary Acheson told his press conference he doubted the Chinese Communists would intervene in the Korean conflict. He termed it very difficult to see how people looking out for their own self-interests would prejudice themselves before the world by challenging the U. N.

Acheson defended himself from charges by Senator Styles Bridges (R. N. H.) that he had given tacit approval for the Chinese Communists to speak on their complaints of American "aggression" before the U. N. Security Council.

On the contrary, Acheson said, he had spoken against seating the Communists in the Assembly, and the American delegation in the Security Council had both spoken and voted against hearing the Communists in the Council on Formosa.

The press conference ranged over a whole variety of U. N. issues. Acheson declared the very last thing he wanted was a test of strength with the Soviet Union—which he termed a nice way of saying war.

His view, he said, was that there could be no beginning of successful negotiations unless both sides were on thoroughly equal terms. To achieve this, he said, there must be a vast increase in strength of the free world. As strength equalizes, chances of negotiation improve, he said.

Turks in 'Associated' Status With 12 Atlantic Pact Powers

By Ferdinand Kuhn

Post Reporter

The 12 North Atlantic Treaty nations yesterday brought Turkey into a partial and "associated" partnership with them in planning the defense of the Mediterranean area.

An Allied invitation and the Turks' acceptance were announced in an exchange of notes between Ferdinand C. Erkin, the Turkish Ambassador here, and Secretary Acheson, representing the treaty organization.

It does not make Turkey a member, or even an associate member, of the treaty organization; the Turks will simply send a representative to the 12-nation military committee, made up of the chiefs of staff, when Mediterranean defense is being discussed.

But the new arrangement insures that the leaders of Turkey's big and well-trained army, the best in the entire Mediterranean, will know the Western Allies' plans for meeting a possible Soviet thrust in that direction. A similar invitation has gone to Greece, the State Department announced yesterday, and an acceptance is expected soon.

The Turks and Greeks alike had wanted to be full-fledged mem-

U. N. Votes Eight-Nation Peace Plan

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 4

(P).—The United Nations Political Committee overwhelmingly approved today an eight-power plan for uniting and rebuilding Korea under a new and stronger U. N. commission.

The committee vote was 47 to 5 (Soviet bloc) after Western leaders rejected efforts for a compromise with an opposing Russian bloc plan.

The committee then gave tacit approval for U. N. forces to cross the thirty-eighth parallel dividing North and South Korea to put down North Korean aggression.

The vote came after a long afternoon of paragraph by paragraph votes in the committee. The committee then turned to the Soviet bloc proposal, with the Russians demanding a roll call vote by paragraphs on a long resolution.

Finally, Russia's Korean plan was defeated by a vote of 46 to 5, with eight abstentions. India abstained on both plans as did most of the Arab nations.

Resolution Provisions

The approved resolution provides:

1. Action, including holding of elections under auspices of the U. N., for establishing a unified, independent and democratic government in the Sovereign State of Korea.

2. That United Nations forces should not remain in any part of Korea longer than necessary for achieving the creation of this unified government. This was taken among the supporting delegates to mean that U. N. forces could pursue North Korean aggressors anywhere in Korea, above or below the 38th parallel.

3. That all necessary measures be taken to accomplish the economic rehabilitation of Korea.

4. A new U. N. commission of seven members to supervise the elections for the new government of the whole of Korea.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky opposed the eight-power plan in long speeches to the committee. He said it was not acceptable because it would permit indefinite occupation of Korea by foreign troops and indicated he would not compromise.

However, when a vote was taken on an Indian proposal to set up a subcommittee to try and find some agreement between the two resolutions, he voted for it. The Indian plan lost, 32 against 24 for and three absentees (the Netherlands, Pakistan and Turkey).

The General Assembly is expected to approve the majority resolution speedily, perhaps late this week.

To Stop 'Drift Toward War'

Stassen Writes Stalin Asking Personal Parley in Peace Bid

(Text of Mr. Stassen's letter, Page 11)

By Edward T. Follard

Post Reporter

Harold E. Stassen announced yesterday he had asked Premier Joseph Stalin for a personal conference in an "effort to stop the drift toward war."

He made his proposal in a letter to Stalin, which was left at the Russian Embassy here Monday. He said if there was to be a reply, it probably would "take four or five weeks at least."

"I believe that the rules of the Soviet Union are currently re-evaluating and reexamining their own policies and program toward the world," Stassen said in a statement.

"The greatest danger of world war in the future, as in other times in history, is that the Soviet Union would now or later miscalculate and underestimate the strength or the intentions of the United States of America."

"It seems important that at this time they should have an expression from someone active in the political party in the United States which is not in power in the Administration. Such an expression also would appear to have a constructive value in other countries and among our own people."

Stassen, formerly Governor of Minnesota and now president of the University of Pennsylvania, talked with Stalin at the Kremlin in April, 1947. Later that year he toured the United States in a campaign for the 1948 Republican nomination for President.

In advance of his news conference here yesterday, Stassen announced he would make a move of "national and international" importance. Consequently, some 60 or 70 reporters and photographers were on hand at the Staller when he issued his statement.

In an exchange about domestic politics, Stassen almost but not quite eliminated himself from the 1952 presidential race. Asked about the GOP nomination and his plans, he said at first that it was a long way off and then added:

"I anticipate that I will more than likely support some other man for the nomination."

Trebling Size of Marine Corps Urged by Vinson at Hearing

By Marshall Andrews

Post Reporter

Congress will be asked to provide for a Marine Corps of 326,000 men in four divisions and two air wings, Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee said yesterday.

Vinson said he believed, on the basis of Marine Corps testimony before his committee, that a force of this size would be necessary to the national security. It would almost triple the present strength of the corps and raise it to more than 10 percent of the projected military establishment of three million men.

Maj. Gen. Merwin H. Silverthorn, assistant Marine commandant, explained that 326,000 officers and men would provide four war-strength combat divisions of about 22,000 each and 24 fighter squadrons together with necessary supporting elements. The Marine Corps, Silverthorn said, now has one full-strength division in Korea and a second in the United States being built to strength. There are six Marine air squadrons in Korea, he said, with others being filled up and trained.

74,366 on Last June 25

Silverthorn revealed that the Marine Corps had a total strength of 74,366 when South Korea was invaded last June 25. Since then, he said, the corps has been built up by activating reserves and by recruiting to 123,000, of whom 104,700 are in ground units and 18,600 in air squadrons. The corps' goal, he continued, is 166,155 officers and men in two divisions and 18 air squadrons by June 30, 1951.

Silverthorn, with no little pride, told the committee the Marine Corps had mobilized 90 percent of its organized reserve in 43 days, with negligible losses on account of physical disability. When he explained that only 1685 of 39,838 in the Marine organized reserve were dropped for physical reasons, Vinson said:

"That's a very fine reserve. That's a better showing than any other service has made."

The committee chairman has sharply criticized the other services for failing to discover before the induction date that many of their officers and men were physically unfit for active duty.

Silverthorn explained also that

Fort Belvoir GIs Put to Work As Carpenters Continue Strike

GIs have been ordered to do the work of striking carpenters at Fort Belvoir on buildings considered unsafe for incoming training units, it was learned yesterday.

Approximately 150 AFL carpenters walked off three barracks under protest against the use of non-union carpenters on repair projects.

With no solution to the dispute in sight, the commanding general of Fort Belvoir and the Engineer Center, Maj. Gen. Douglas L. Weart, has ordered troop unit commanders moving into reactivated World War II barracks to use GI mechanics where necessary to provide or repair fire ladders, stairways, sidewalks, and other facilities.

Military Strategy To Govern Advance; U. S. Officers Among 1000 Massacred

TOKYO (Thursday), Oct. 5

(P).—United States and other United Nations forces will cross the thirty-eighth parallel into North Korea the minute that military strategy warrants, a spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters said today.

Commenting for the first time on the hitherto hush-hush subject, the headquarters source said there are no political barriers to such a thrust.

A spokesman also made it plain that South Korean troops, now 60 miles inside North Korea on the east coast, were not acting independently. He said their push was not a mere isolated drive.

"General MacArthur has as much authority over the South Korean forces as he does over an American division," one source stated.

Advance Bases for Planes

Seven fighter squadrons, supporting the South Korean push operated today from new advance bases which brought all North Korean reach.

The Far East Air Force said jet and propeller-driven planes were in a position from the new bases to carry rockets and napalm (jellied gasoline) bombs anywhere in Korea north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

While 20,000 South Korean troops ranged far up the east coast in North Korea, bombers and fighters tore into the rail and highway lines which could serve the Reds in preparing defenses.

Today's air summary said that planes, operating despite bad weather Wednesday, found but few significant targets "on the battered rail or highway net" in North Korea.

B-29s blasted 12 Red marshalling yards. The summary specified these yards as "secondary." The Far East Air Force previously had reported all major yards knocked out.

There was no immediate indication when General MacArthur would be ready to carry out his threat Sunday of total destruction of the enemy army if the Red Korean regime failed to heed his demand for surrender "within a reasonable time."

Third Division in Asia

But as the hours and days ticked off without response from the Communist forces of Red Premier Kim Il Sung, MacArthur's headquarters saw fit to announce the arrival of the U. S. Third Division in the Far East command.

Besides these fresh troops MacArthur already had in the field six American divisions (90,000 men if at full strength) and a regimental combat team, plus about 10,000 British, Australian and Filipino troops and three South Korean divisions of approximately 30,000 men still south of the arbitrary boundary line.

Five thousand Siamese troops and a battalion of French soldiers were available in southeast Asia for air-lift or sea-borne transportation to Korea.

Thus far only two South Korean See KOREA, Page 3, Col. 3.

Mystery 'Signals' From Outer Space Puzzle Britons

LONDON, Oct. 4 (P).—British scientists admitted puzzlement today over mysterious "radio signals" from space.

They can't figure out the origin of the sounds, which are being received here daily. They produce a hissing noise and are visible when passed through a cathode ray tube.

They are similar to radio emanations known to come from the stars.

But plotting of the mystery signals—continuous and unintelligible—indicates they are coming from outer space where no major stars are known to be.

Doctor Draft Board Named by Truman

President Truman yesterday named a seven-member commission to advise the Selective Service System in the drafting of doctors, dentists, and allied medical men.

Naming of the commission was a preliminary to issuing a proclamation for the registration of doctors and dentists through the age of 31. The President was said to be working on the proclamation aboard the White House yacht, the Williamsburg, cruising on Chesapeake Bay.

The registration day is understood to be October 16, but it is not yet clear whether the proclamation will call for registration of all draft-eligible doctors and dentists, or only those who received their education at Government expense during World War II but saw little or no service.

The advisory commission named yesterday is made up of the same experts recently chosen for the Health Resources Advisory Committee of the National Security Resources Board. This unusual action indicates that the NSRB's health committee will play a considerable role in establishing top-level policy on all medical and health matters pertaining to the Nation's mobilization effort.

Heading both committees is Dr. Howard A. Rusk of New York University and the Bellevue Medical Center.

Other members of the dual committee include Dr. William P. Shepard, professor of public health at Stanford University; Dr. James C. Sargent of Marquette University medical school; Dr. Leo J. Schoeny, of the American Dental Association; Dean of Nursing Ruth Kuehn, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. John B. Pastere, executive director, Hospital Council of Greater New York; and Dr. Harold Diehl, dean of medical sciences, University of Minnesota.

93 District Draftees Inducted Into Army

Ninety-three Washington draftees were inducted into the Army yesterday at Arlington Farms, Va., then sent to Fort Meade, Md.

Of the 93, one was a draftee who failed to show up earlier for preinduction tests. Four other "missing" draftees showed up, but were rejected for failure to pass the qualification tests.

Thirty-one other "missing" draftees were ordered yesterday. Their failure to show up yesterday will result in their names being turned over to the district attorney's office for possible prosecution.

Hershey Talk Draws Fire

Robbins, executive director of the society.

A second attack came from Oliver Grobstein, an official of the Federation of American Scientists and a biologist at the National Cancer Institute. He said there's a danger the United States may squander its scientific strength. "It is a real danger and should not be dismissed as baloney," he asserted.

Robbins charged the Selective Service director's viewpoint is contrary to that presented by the President's Scientific Research Board in 1947, quoted by Robbins as follows:

"In striking a balance among this complex of war pressures, the government decided against deferment of science students. In the light of the effect of the policy in contributing to the present shortage, the wisdom of the decision seems dubious."

Training Necessary Robbins maintained that "continuous training of our technical talent in a long period of mobilization" is necessary for the development of guided missiles, improvement of atomic weapons, and the like.

"No one argues with General Hershey that the No. 1 job is to supply the armed forces with the fighting manpower it needs," Robbins said. "But let us not put the best in equipment and weapons which only America's technical men can conceive and produce."

Under the present draft law, which covers men from the ages of 19 to 26, scientists and professional men are not deferred as a group, but may obtain individual deferments on the basis of being essential for a critical job.

General Hershey's call for a "tough" deferment policy for scientists was made before the Society for Personnel Administration. The Selective Service chief charged in effect, that too many professional and scientific men of mediocre ability are getting deferred.

District GI and Lieutenant Are Wounded in War Action

Two separate Defense Department releases yesterday disclosed that Second Lieut. Robert S. Wood, 23, of Washington was wounded in action in Korea and has been awarded the Silver Star medal.

Lieutenant Wood is the son of Col. Walter S. Wood, United States Army (Ret.) of 2311 Connecticut ave. nw., and the husband of Mrs. Betty Mollison Wood of 3140 Wisconsin ave. nw.

According to his father, young Wood, with the Eighth Cavalry Regiment of the First Cavalry Division, was wounded September 5 while climbing over a wall. Colonel Wood said he talked with his son a few days ago via long distance telephone and learned he was recovering from a bullet wound in the left shoulder.

Neither young Wood nor Eighth Army Headquarters in Tokyo have given details on how the District soldier won the Silver Star.

Wood attended Georgetown University and was commissioned in the ROTC there. He later transferred to the University of New Mexico, from which he graduated last March.

The Defense Department casualty list, made public yesterday, also listed as wounded in action, Corp. Henry E. McLaurin, 21, of 2 Wonders ct. sw.

McLaurin could at least find something to be cheerful about despite being injured.

In the next few days the young GI will be in Washington and will see his first child for the first time—Walter, aged 2½ months.

McLaurin telephoned his wife last Saturday from Kentucky, saying he had been slightly wounded in the leg by a bullet and would be here shortly. McLaurin joined the Army in 1948. A member of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, he had been in Korea about a month before being wounded.

Yesterday's list of area wounded included Corp. James H. Shannon, Jr., formerly of 3230 17th st. nw. His family now lives in Mississippi. Also wounded was Marine Corps Pfc. Cecil Charles Finn, formerly of 28th st. ne. Finn's family lives in Colton, Calif.

The death of Tech. Sergt. James William Hargis of 639 Yuma st. se. listed yesterday was reported in The Washington Post Monday.

The Post also carried Monday an account of Second Lieut. Robert Russell Dickey 3d, of 1715 N st. nw., whose name appeared on yesterday's list of wounded.

In Virginia, the Defense Department announced yesterday that Marine Corp. Stanley Ray Dennis, 24, of The Plains, Va., was killed in action. His mother, Mrs. Lucy Dennis, said she had been notified that her son was killed in the liberation of Seoul on September 22. He was a member of the First Battalion, Fifth Regiment, First Marine Division, and had served since December, 1944. In World War II he fought at Guam and two Jima. Besides his parents, he leaves two brothers, Franklin and Kenneth of The Plains, and a sister, Anne, of Baltimore.

Look for Ultra Clothes in '75

The fabrics of 25 years hence will be almost unrecognizable compared to present textiles, Dr. Winfield H. Heckert, chemical director of the duPont Co.'s rayon department, said here yesterday.

He was a speaker at the closing sessions of the two-day combined meeting of the Commercial Chemical Development Association and the Chemical Market Research Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Heckert described synthetic fabrics now in development that nearly duplicate—and sometimes better—the properties of silk, wool and linen.

Among the speakers was Charles L. McCuen, vice president and general manager of the research

1600 Spaces Soon to Ease Pentagon Parking Problem

The Pentagon parking problem—a case of too many cars and too few spaces—will be eased in 90 days with the addition of 1600 spaces.

The Public Buildings Service said the new lanes will be added to the north parking area. The site is land between the north lot and the sewage disposal plant.

Since the expansion of personnel, Pentagon employees and visitors have had a large-scale parking problem.

At its peak as many as 1000 cars have been turned away in a day. Most of the difficulty has been caused by drivers who park without permits and drivers who fail to park in their assigned lanes.

There are 10,000 permits for parking spaces. The capacity is about 6000 cars. The increase in personnel has brought about an increase in violations—as many as 7000 in a day.

The Pentagon parking patrol staff has been increased from 7 to 12 to aid the situation. Parking also has been permitted on Boundary. Meanwhile, permits are being issued only when the holders leave assignments at the Pentagon.

The new parking spaces will consist of eight lanes of 200 spaces each. Bids will be opened Tuesday on construction of the lanes.

Army Ready to Cross Border

60 MILES ABOVE BORDER—South Korean forces continued their push in North Korea yesterday, stabbing to a point (A) 60 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel. They plunged toward Wonsan and broken arrows indicate their announced aim of going on to the Manchurian border. Meantime, the Allied Air Forces awaited a weather break for further attacks on the Red convoy sighted at Pakchon (B) on the Antung-Pyongyang highway.

Trebled Marine Corps Asked

almost 6000 members of the organized reserve had been deferred for various periods because of hardship. He added that the Marine Corps would adopt a recent Navy policy in deferring and relieving from active duty those men with three dependents.

In common with the Navy and Air Force, Silverthorn rejected the suggestion proposed by the Army and Selective Service that a manpower pool be established into which men for all services would be drafted. The Marine Corps, he said, was meeting no difficulty in filling its quota with volunteers and was able to maintain a higher standard than would be possible if all its men were drafted.

Asked by Vinson what lessons the Marine Corps had learned from combat in Korea, Silverthorn said there were four, of which one was new and three were "re-affirmations" of Marine Corps doctrine. The new lesson, he explained, was that the helicopter was entirely practicable for use in battle. Marines in Korea started operations with five, he said, which were used for reconnaissance, liaison, visual flank security, posting and supplying security detachments and patrols, evacuating wounded and many other jobs.

1. It is "absolutely necessary" to have in readiness a force adequate to carry out whatever tasks may result from conditions at any given time. In order to make the landing at Inchon, Silverthorn said, one Marine battalion had to be shipped all the way from the Mediterranean to Korea.

2. The capability of Marines to take part in extended land warfare.

3. The validity of the Marine air-ground concept and its amphibious doctrine. In Korea, he said, Marine fighter aircraft in close support bombed enemy forces within 50 yards of Marines on the ground. This, Silverthorn maintained, resulted from Marine Corps policy of requiring its officers to serve two years in ground units before qualifying as pilots and from combined training, ground control of supporting aircraft and excellent communications.

Silverthorn described the Inchon landing as "the most difficult amphibious operation in history" and said it was successful because of Marine Corps specialization and training in that type of fighting. In answer to a question, he said the operation was made exceptionally difficult by unusual tides, by the fact that the landing involved an assault on a city, by the separation of the beaches and their vulnerability to fire from buildings which overlooked them.

Vinson said his committee would meet today to draft a memorandum on the results of its two weeks of post-session hearings. It was expected hearings would be resumed later this week.

French Quit Key Fortress Along Border

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—French forces have abandoned their key northern fortress of Cao Bang, leaving 200 miles of the Indo-China border unprotected from possible Communist attack, and are retreating toward Thakhe, 25 miles to the south-east, a communiqué said today.

Cao Bang was the third frontier post to fall since the French lost Dongkhe September 18 after heavy fighting. The others were Pakha on the northern border and Haongsuphe in the same area. The latter two were abandoned as "undefendable" in view of heavy Viet Minh concentrations in the vicinity.

French planes supported the withdrawal of Foreign Legionnaires and Moroccan troops in an overland dash through rocky passes held by Viet Minh rebels whose leader is Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh. The civilians in Cao Bang were evacuated by airlift last week.

A French spokesman said Cao Bang was abandoned Tuesday morning.

The French communiqué said the evacuation was part of Gen. Marcel Carpentier's plan for "readjustment of the defensive system on the northeastern frontier." Carpentier is French Commander-in-Chief in Indo-China.

One Western diplomatic observer said, "the French are only pulling in their horns from useless positions to consolidate defense of the rice-producing Tonkin Delta which is far more valuable than the frontier."

Jap Ships May Now Carry 12 Passengers

TOKYO, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Approval has been granted to qualified Japanese ships to carry a maximum of 12 passengers a voyage, it was announced today by Col. H. T. Miller, chief of the civil transportation section of Allied headquarters.

divisions have crossed the thirty-eighth parallel.

Elements of the Third Division wheeled and walked their way well above captured Kosong, eastern seaboard town 50 air miles north of the parallel. They headed toward Tongchon, 25 miles farther north.

North Korean prisoners said the Reds were digging strong defensive positions at Tongchon.

Tongchon is about 30 air miles south of the big east coast industrial port of Wonsan—a primary objective of the Third Division.

Red Withdrawals Admitted

The Republican Capital Division spread north and northwest about a dozen miles above the old border which for five years separated the Communist North from the Republic South. Neither government recognized the border's validity.

The South Korean Sixth Division reached, but did not cross the parallel Wednesday.

The North Korean army in a Wednesday morning communiqué said its forces on all fronts were "withdrawing to undertake new duties."

It did not specify what the duties were likely to be. Another Red broadcast spoke of factory workers in Pyongyang, the Communist capital, "volunteering" for front line duties.

The commander of United Nations naval forces said today more than 65 mines have been destroyed off Korea during the past month.

Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy said moored and floating mines pose the most serious threat to U. N. forces afloat off both the east and west coasts.

A second big motorized supply convoy in as many days was sighted by aircraft Tuesday night rolling south from the Manchurian border.

AF Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Fifth Air Force headquarters that the column of about 150 vehicles was located by B-26 night intruder planes of the Fifth Air Force near Pakchon, 50 miles northwest of Pyongyang.

Bad weather prevented an air strike on the column Wednesday and limited air activities over most of Korea.

Fifth Air Force attacks on a supply column moving south in the general vicinity of Pyongyang on Monday night and Tuesday resulted in the destruction of 50 vehicles, revised reports said. Earlier 85 trucks and other vehicles were reported destroyed or probably destroyed.

An Air Force spokesman, commenting on the heavy traffic from toward the Red capital, said: "There has been a steady movement of supplies by road from the Manchurian border south all through the war. The trucks don't move every night, but frequently."

Troops Not Believed Aboard

Air Force officials did not believe the supply columns carried troops.

In Taipei, Formosa, a Chinese Nationalist Ministry of Defense spokesman speculated that Red China could send so-called "volunteers" into Korea or detach from the Red army more men of Korean origin without openly intervening in the war.

Two North Korean divisions from the Chinese Communist Fifth-fifth and Fifty-fifth Armies saw action on the Nakdong River front before the Red collapse in September, the spokesman declared.

MacArthur's big Army in South Korea continued to mop up remnants of the shattered North Korean invasion force which once overwhelmed all the peninsula except for a stout little 125-mile United Nations perimeter in the southeast corner of Korea.

A total bag of 25,000 Red prisoners had been taken since the Red retreat began in mid-September, official reports showed.

The largest total of captives thus far taken in a single day was 4,166 bagged on Wednesday on all fronts.

The First Marine Division holding Uijongbu, 12 miles north of Seoul, after a fierce clash with rear guard Reds, sealed off the last main avenue of retreat for Communist troops.

East of Seoul South Korean Marines continued a slow advance. They ran into mortar fire from Reds offering stubborn resistance.

The U. S. Seventh Division, south of Seoul continued to patrol and block small groups of the Red army attempting to infiltrate north.

There were no reliable estimates on the number of Communist troops who have succeeded in making their way north.

Nor was there an estimate of

'My Best Years Are Ahead,' Legless GI Writes Mom, Dad

Mrs. Mullen reads a letter from her wounded son, Bobby.

BOSTON, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Bobby Mullen never wanted Mom and Dad to "worry and feel bad" and so he always concealed his boyhood hurts.

Bobby is 19 now. When he was out of high school at 17 he begged his parents to let him join the Army and "see some of the world." Bobby has seen the world and now he's coming home. The letter from a ship homeward bound from Korea arrived last night.

But he had a hurt this time he couldn't conceal.

Mrs. Michael Mullen read his letter just a few words at a time because her tears kept blurring the writing:

"Dear Ma and Dad," she read: "I'm on my way home, but I'm bringing some bad news . . . I hope you don't take this so hard as some people would . . . I went to Korea and got wounded in both my legs . . . They had to be amputated . . . I only remember the explosion and the hospital at Inchon.

"I'm relieved to get away from it all. Mom and Dad, and there will be something to look forward to when I see you people again."

"The only thing I am worried about is you folks . . . I don't want you to be worrying and going around with tears in your eyes . . . There was another line: "Please excuse the handwriting as I am a bit shaky at present."

"Your loving son, Bob."

looted before the Communists left Wonju around 3 a. m. Monday.

Lieutenant Leick said he hid beneath the floor of a Korean house and heard the screams of men, women and children as the Reds stormed through the streets cutting them down.

In the south survivors told United Nations investigators the Reds killed 2000 South Koreans in Chonju, and 1100 more in nearby Taejon where 700 bodies were found in a Franciscan monastery.

Another 700 atrocity victims were reported 35 miles east of Seoul by an American military adviser with the Korean Second Corps.

Third Division Plans Secret

While South Korean troops in rubber-soled shoes plodded deeper into the communist North, MacArthur's headquarters kept its plans for the United States Third Division under wraps.

The Third was under the command of Maj. Gen. Robert H. Soule, formerly military attaché at Nanking during the closing phases of the civil war.

General Soule commanded the 18th Glider Infantry Regiment of the Eleventh Airborne Division in the Philippines liberation campaign.

The Third Division's Fifteenth Infantry Regiment served 26 years in China until the start of World War II.

The division won fame in the European Theater during World War II in 169 days of uninterrupted fighting from the Mediterranean to the Rhine.

Vargas Takes Lead in First Brazil Returns

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Former President Getulio Vargas piled up a lead tonight in the first partial returns from yesterday's presidential election.

Vargas, who ruled Brazil with an iron hand for 15 years until his overthrow by the army in 1945, had an absolute majority over his two principal rivals.

According to official figures given by the supreme electoral tribunal at 8:30 p. m., Vargas had 62,402 votes; Eduardo Gomes, candidate of the National Democratic Union, 35,214, and government candidate Christino Machado, 22,212.

This gave Vargas a 9-to-5 lead over his nearest rival and of nearly 3 to 1 over the administration candidate.

The returns so far are merely fragmentary, however, representing only slightly over one percent of the total vote, expected to reach eight million.

Turkey Gets Part in Pact have led to an application from nearby Israel, which, in turn, would have sharpened the old quarrel with the Arab states.

In the end the Ministers decided to turn Turkey down, but in such a way as to use Turkish experience and not offend Turkish pride. As Secretary Acheson explained it formally to the Turkish Ambassador:

"It would be desirable, if the Turkish government so wished, to make such arrangements which would permit Turkey to be associated with such appropriate phases of the military planning work of the North Atlantic Treaty organization as are concerned with the defense of the Mediterranean."

"The North Atlantic Council is keenly aware of the active support which Turkey, as a member of the United Nations, has accorded the principles of the United Nations, and of the important role Turkey is playing in the maintenance of the stability of the eastern Mediterranean area."

Acheson expressed the belief of his treaty partners that "association" of Turkey "would contribute significantly to the defense of that area." The Turkish Ambassador replied that Turkey had accepted the invitation, partly "in view of the fact that it has always concurred in its policy to the task of bringing the most effective contribution to the security and the preservation of peace."

Petroleum Unit Asks Refiners To Spur Aviation Gas Output

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The newly-created Petroleum Administration for Defense yesterday appealed to American oil refiners to take emergency measures to increase production of aviation gasoline.

The PAD, set up under the Interior Department, sent telegrams asking refiners for reports on how much more aviation fuel they could turn out between now and the end of the year, and what the "abnormal costs" of doing so would come to.

The PAD administrator, Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman, promised to use his "best efforts" to see that additional costs would be met by the Government buyers—for the most part, the armed services.

Those extra costs will come mainly from the transcontinental shipping of various chemical components that go into the special, high octane aviation fuel.

The PAD hope, officials explained yesterday, is an additional production of aviation gas averaging 25,000 barrels a day between now and the end of the year.

If that goal is realized, the effect on civilian motorists will scarcely be discernible, they said. The octane rating of ordinary and high-test automobile gasoline will be dropped only fractionally, and the reduced quantity—25,000 barrels taken from about a three-million-barrel daily civilian consumption—will not be noticeable.

If the aviation gas shortage continues, however, as it is expected to do, there may be more drastic measures later, officials indicated. But even these will not reduce the quality of motor vehicle fuel below that of the summer of 1949, it was predicted.

Meantime, in other Governmental action yesterday aimed at the problem of shortages, the Interstate Commerce Commission established the Defense Transportation Administration.

Under the direction of ICC Commissioner James K. Knudson, the new agency will carry out the sort of work done in World War II by the Office of Defense Transportation.

Its responsibilities are to assure adequate transportation for the defense effort and, if necessary, to impose priorities for freight movements.

No Freedom, Heavy Taxes, Rule in Red Korea

YANGYANG, Korea, Oct. 4 (AP). Some North Koreans in this first Asian Iron curtain city to be liberated said their Communist bosses were worse than the Japanese. But the northerners liked the Red policy of redistributing the land.

The Japanese rulers went out at the end of the war. Then came the Korean Communist rulers to this town of 10,000 just north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

These people who lived for five years under the Communists don't easily forget the fear they knew. But Chai Byong Il and the others seem to be doing their best to overcome it.

They have begun to criticize their Red rulers. While it is the way of the Orient to get on the bandwagon, this criticism takes some courage in a people who cannot be sure the Reds won't be back soon.

Chai told about life behind the Iron Curtain as we sat on the floor of his eight-by-eight foot room on a Yangyang side street.

He was in Japan when the war ended. The smugglers who brought him and his family back landed in North Korea. The Communists would not let them go into South Korea because Chai's wife was a Northerner.

Chai went to work cooking for the Yangyang Communist Party headquarters. He cooked for about 50 young party workers who had been trained in Pyongyang, the Communist capital.

Chai said the Reds held regular elections. Candidates were handpicked by the Communist Korean Labor Party. The voters could approve by dropping a ballot in a white box. If they disapproved, they could put their ballot in a black box.

"Nearly everybody voted in the white box," Chai said with a smile. Opposition showed up only once. The Northwest Young Men's Association was formed to oppose Red rule. It was affiliated with the South Korean Young Men's Association.

Chai said the leader was shot and the rest were jailed. That ended resistance.

"I hated the Communists," said Chai's grim-faced landlady, looking in through the door. "We had no freedom."

No freedom, but plenty of taxes. Chai's brother-in-law, Shin Hai Son, spoke up. He is a farmer from a nearby village. He was bitter about the taxes.

Under the Japanese, he said, the tax was about one-fourth of the crop. Under the Communists it was increased to more than 50 percent of the crop.

I then asked if most North Koreans preferred Japanese rule to that of the Communists. Both men nodded vigorously.

"But of course it will be much better to have our own government for the whole country," Chai said.

Shin expressed satisfaction with at least one thing the Communists had done: Distribution of farm land. He said absentee landlords had been stripped of their holdings and the farms were turned over to the men who worked them. Each adult over 20 years was given about one-seventh of an acre. Farmers who produced the most got additional land.

Shin said the land redistribution program was the one thing the Communists had done that got the approval of most Koreans.

Neither Chai nor Shin ever saw Russians in and around Yangyang. Shin, however, said he had heard North Korean soldiers who were digging fortifications along the thirty-eighth parallel say they were working under Russian instructors.

NU-NAP Process removes the shine, restores the nap on many suit and dress fabrics!

Here's What NU-NAP Does:

By reviving the nap remaining in the fabric, NU-NAP removes shine, restores the "life."

BEFORE AFTER

Longer Life for Your Clothes!

Get many, many more wearings from suits, coats, dresses and uniforms!

DURING WORLD WAR II, thousands of suits, dresses, coats and uniforms were NU-NAP processed. The results brought enthusiastic acclaim from customers, fashion writers, clothing manufacturers, government conservation agencies. Experience shows that NU-NAP can bring EXTRA WEAR to MOST garments. Phone District 0268 today for pick-up, or bring your garments in.

Read these Questions and Answers about NU-NAP

Q. Is NU-NAP a preparation I buy and use myself?
A. No. NU-NAP isn't "something in a bottle"... or any kind of chemical. NU-NAP is a patented process, available in Washington only at the NU-NAP Process Corp.

Q. What fabrics will NU-NAP help?
A. In men's clothes... serges, worsteds, gabardines, smooth weaves that get shiny. Also tweeds, flannels, mohairs, camel's hairs... fabrics whose nap wears easily. In women's clothes: worsteds, gabardines, silk, rayon, any fabric that becomes shiny. Also velvets, where the pile is not damaged or heat-burned.

Q. Will NU-NAP hurt or weaken the fabric in the garment?
A. NU-NAP restores the nap which still remains in the garment and does not affect fabrics strength.

Q. How long does NU-NAP last?
A. As a rule, a garment with NU-Nap treatment will give you about the same wear as you have already obtained from it.

Q. Does NU-NAP affect the color of fabrics?
A. By restoring the nap-finish of the fabrics, NU-NAP brings back the richness of the original color. Customers are often amazed by this color restoration.

Q. What does NU-NAP Processing Cost?
A. For a complete man's or woman's suit, or for outercoats, $7.50—including a quality cleaning and pressing. For items like skirts or jackets alone, NU-NAP costs $3.75, including cleaning and pressing.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE!

Yes, if you are not completely satisfied with your garments after NU-NAP processing, we will refund your money. Now read some of the comments we have received from NU-NAP customers:

From a Businessman:
"I received my suit and am well satisfied. I am sending you another..."

A Naval Officer:
"I did not believe it was possible to restore the nap and improve the appearance as you have done. The cost is more than justified."

Clothing Manufacturer:
"I want to congratulate you on the job you did. I have never seen one done quite so well."

A Housewife:
"Am very pleased with the way you restored the suit and am telling many friends about it."

Third Division Boasts Fine Combat Record

The Third Division, which General MacArthur now has in the Far East, has a long and brilliant combat record in two world wars.

One of its units, the 15th Infantry Regiment, has served 26 years in China, but most of the Third's fame was won in Europe.

It was organized November 7, 1917, at Camp Greene, N. C., of Regular Army units, and went to France five months later.

It won its nickname, "Rock of the Marne," in its first major engagement, holding the Germans in their desperate summer drive in 1918 at Chateau-Thierry. Other units fell back on both of its flanks but the Third held. It won a French citation for this. The division fought a defensive battle at Champaign-Marne and then took the offensive at Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne.

War I Casualties Heavy

In World War I it took 2241 prisoners but its casualties were exceedingly heavy, totaling 16,117 killed, wounded or missing.

In World War II it fought in 531 days of combat, making four amphibious landings in North Africa, Sicily, Anzio and in France, suffering more casualties than any other division. Its toll was 34,224 killed, wounded and missing. Its most costly day was May 23, 1944, when it stopped three German divisions ordered by Hitler to drive the Third into the sea. On that day it had 995 killed and wounded but again, as in the first war in France, it eventually threw the Germans back.

There were 169 days of uninterrupted fighting from the Mediterranean to the Rhine and the French awarded the division its fourragere (braided loop over the left shoulder) for the Battle of Colmar.

The Third's present commander is Maj. Gen. Robert H. Soule, who was a reserve officer at the University of Wyoming during World War I. He was commissioned during the war and served with the Army expeditionary force in Siberia. General Soule has had long experience in Asia. He was assigned to duty in the Philippines in 1920.

In October, 1929 he went to Peiping, China, on a special mission for the State Department. He returned in 1933 but in March, 1937, went to Tientsin, China, with the 15th Infantry.

In World War II he commanded the 188th Glider Infantry, 11th Airborne Division, through the difficult Leyte campaign, where his outfit spearheaded the landing at Nasugbu, Luzon. Subsequently he commanded a series of continued parachute, ground and amphibious forces that liberated the prisoners of Los Banos Prison and accomplished other missions.

In March, 1945, he was appointed assistant commander of the 38th Infantry Division and commanded its infantry units during the remainder of the Philippine campaign.

In 1946 he returned to China as the military attaché at Nanking. More recently he has been assigned to the Office of the Chief of Staff of the Army, stationed at San Francisco.

Hopes Vanish In Britain for U. S. Cash Aid

LONDON, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Prospects for cash dollar contribution from the United States to help cushion Britain's heavy three-year defense program have vanished "almost completely," authoritative quarters said today.

One source believed the United States has advised Britain to expect assistance in the form of planes, tanks and guns, but not in dollars. The British had said they could not carry out their 10 billion dollar program without "substantial United States assistance," in addition to Marshall aid grants.

It was believed here that the United States policy of withholding cash was motivated by a desire to make sure that American assistance be used immediately and exclusively for defense.

Informed sources intimated that the United States is not inclined to make up to Britain any loss of export revenue caused by the increased defense requirements of the United Kingdom.

Squirrel Puts Lights Out

Czech Plane in Britain

LONDON, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Twelve refugees who fled Prague Saturday in a government plane have ended their flight at Manston, Kent, the Air Ministry announced today. Officials refused to say whether the refugees had been granted asylum.

Symington Lists Red Threats

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, warned yesterday that the United States faces the greatest peril in its history because Russia can now deliver an atom bomb by sea or air against the United States.

Speaking to a group of leaders of national women's clubs and organizations gathered at NSRB headquarters to discuss participation of women in civil defense, Symington said:

"America is in far greater danger than at any time in its history. In the event of enemy attack we have a good chance of losing unless we face defense matters realistically. If we are hit, our ability to fight back will depend on whether we have built up adequate civilian defense."

Regarding the threat of Russian attack he said, "we know that Russia has a bigger army, a bigger fleet of submarines and a bigger air force capable of delivering the atom bomb. As Russia continues to build a stock of atom bombs, the threat increases."

Discussing civil defense protection of critical target areas, Leslie Kullenberg, research chief of the NSRB civil defense office, said all of the northern part of the United States was vulnerable to "round trip air attack."

Declaring that it would be "fatal to think the Korean war is over," Symington said, "yesterday's large losses of dead and wounded and reports of the enemy column moving down from the north are proof that it is not." Regarding eventual end of hostilities, he predicted, "the Korean war will never be over until we have a firm understanding with the satellite countries of Russia and with Russia itself."

Civil Defense Aid By CAP Proposed

An air force of 150 to 300 small private planes which could land on the Mall to deliver emergency equipment or make air reports on bomb damage may soon be added to the Washington area civil defense program.

Lieut. Donald D. Webster, acting commander of the National Capital Wing of the Civil Air Patrol, asked District civil defense leaders yesterday for instructions to organize private aircraft owners here into a disaster team.

"Many of the 300 persons owning planes within 15 miles of Washington are asking how they can help in civil defense," Webster said.

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon B. Young, in whose office the meeting was held, said he was "very much in favor of organizing the civilian aircraft on a volunteer basis."

Battle Announces Steps in Civil Defense

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Several steps toward perfecting Virginia's civilian defense program were announced today by Governor Battle and State Coordinator J. H. Wyse.

One was the appointment of eight specialists in various fields and county defense officials organize their local groups of civil defenders.

Another was the announcement of plans for three conferences in Roanoke next week to discuss organization of medical emergency services, industrial plant protection and formation of Roanoke area defense units.

Battle and Wyse talked over defense matters today in the light of what Wyse learned Monday and Tuesday at Washington conferences of state defense officials with Federal authorities.

2 Sailors Put Across Great Victory for Navy, Recruit 5 District Nurses for Active Service

RECEIVE ORDERS—Five nurses, all from the Georgetown University Hospital, will leave today and Friday on active-duty assignments in the Navy's Nurse Corps. Going over their orders with Lieut. Comdr. Arlia Pembroke are Ensigns Shirley McFalls, Rita Howe, Margaret Logsdon, Doris Reese and Catherine C. Knight

Always trust a sailor—the moral of this story is—to take care of the Navy's womanpower needs. In proof of the moral, an apartment out Northwest has just been vacated by its four nurse occupants. And a fifth nurse, the other member of a quintet of nurse buddies here, is going into the Navy too.

The five, all nurses at Georgetown University Hospital, will leave Washington today and Friday on active-duty assignments as reserve ensigns in the Navy's Nurse Corps.

They are Rita Howe, 23, of Washington; Margaret Logsdon, 22, of Cumberland, Md.; Catherine Knight, 22, of Leonardtown, Md.; and Shirley McFalls, 22, of Altoona, Pa.

The sailors who turned this impressive recruiting trick? They are Rita's brothers.

The five nurses were friends all through their training at Georgetown's School of Nursing. After graduation in 1949 they got an apartment together at 1881 Thirty-fifth st. nw., except for Miss Reese, who lives with her parents at 1213 Thirty-fourth st. nw.

Rita was entranced by the idea of being a Navy nurse when she got letters from her brother during the last war about his life on an aircraft carrier. This desire was whetted to a razor edge by more letters from another brother who is now a submariner in the regular Navy.

One hitch was that she hated to leave her nurse buddies behind. Simple solution: Why not take them with her?

So she began a quiet but sensationally efficient, as it turned out, campaign to persuade them into signing up with her.

The campaign reached a climax last month when all were accepted.

For now Rita and the Misses Reese and Logsdon will go to the Naval Hospital at Philadelphia, the Misses Knight and McFall to the one at Great Lakes. But they hope all to be together again eventually.

Those Howe men really did a recruiting job. Leave it to a sailor.

Arlington School Site Cost Set at $9800

A three-man Arlington Circuit Court jury yesterday set $9800 as the price the county School Board must pay for land it wants on N. 13th st. for the Washington-Lee High School.

The property, owned by Adrian Gilbert of 1312 N. Quincy st., now is the site of a small store. The board had offered $7500 for the property while Gilbert had asked $18,500. The board then began condemnation action to acquire the land, needed for a projected high school addition.

Berlin Barge Battle Deadlock Nears End

BERLIN, Oct. 4 (AP).—British authorities today said the Russians have approved the majority of crew lists and permits for some 200 West German barges they have been holding up for several weeks.

This indicated that the deadlock in the East-West "Battle of the Canals" has been at least partially broken. Britons said they would in turn relax controls on the West Berlin canals. They have been holding about 70 East German barges in the British sector.

Name Calling Laid to AMA by Mrs. Edwards

The Democrats had their inning yesterday in the continuing contest over voluntary or compulsory health insurance.

Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, pitched, retaliating for what she described as "name-calling" by Dr. Austin Smith, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The AMA," Mrs. Edwards said yesterday, "is engaged in a name-calling campaign at a time when it should be concerning itself with the shortage of physicians."

Statement Called "Vicious"

She referred to Dr. Smith's branding here as "vicious lies" statements contained in a mimeographed letter distributed Tuesday by the Democratic Committee's women's division. The letter contended that the "real purpose" of the AMA's upcoming one-million-dollar advertising campaign "is to beat the Democrats at the polls."

"That," charged Dr. Smith at a luncheon meeting of the George Washington University Medical Society, "is one of the most vicious lies ever in a series of vicious lies presented by self-seeking individuals."

Yesterday Mrs. Edwards, said she, herself, wasn't going to "engage in this name-calling campaign." Instead, she asked the AMA to refute, if it can, evidence of physician shortages in reports in the Congressional Record and in a booklet entitled "Better Medical Care That You Can Afford," prepared by the Democratic National Committee.

Welcomes the Truth

"As a Democrat and an American," said Mrs. Edwards, "I believe in our two-party system of government and welcome all efforts to give voters the truth about issues."

Mrs. Edwards' statement yesterday ignored the original letter which brought the conflict into the open. The letter called the AMA advertising campaign "an insidious political tactic designed to cripple the Democratic Party and the Fair Deal program."

It called on its readers to begin a chain-telephone campaign to tell Democrats "what the (AMA) lobby is going to do during October." Recipients of the letter were asked to call ten friends, and urge each of them to telephone ten others.

3 Drug Firms Promise to Mend Ways

The Federal Trade Commission dismissed complaints of false and misleading advertising against three drug companies yesterday on the promise they would mend their ways.

A critical dissent was taken by Commissioner William A. Ayres, who contended the settlement "at best will have no binding effect and cannot be enforced in the event of violation."

The companies against which complaints were dismissed are the Capdine Chemical Co., Raleigh, N. C.; Emerson Drug Co., Baltimore, and Miles Laboratories, Inc., Elkhart, Ind.

Must "Follow Label"

The commission said they agreed in the future to include in their advertising the statement that users of certain of their preparations must "follow the label" and "avoid excessive use."

The preparations involved are Hick's Liquid Capdine, made by Capdine Chemical Co.; Bromo-Seltzer, produced by Emerson Drug, and Dr. Miles Liquid Nerve, Dr. Miles Nerve Tablets and Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills, made by Miles Laboratories.

Emerson Drug also stipulated it would not use the word "alkaline" to mean Bromo-Seltzer "has any effect of reducing 'acidity' except that of the contents of the stomach," or representing that Bromo-Seltzer will relieve fatigue caused by lack of sleep.

Capdine Promises

Capdine Chemical Co. likewise promised not to represent Hick's Liquid Capdine as a pepper-upper for hangovers, or that it acts quicker than other compounds because it is in liquid form.

The orders dismissing the complaints stated that "the public interest will be best served" by settling the proceedings in this manner through approval of the stipulations and agreements.

Commissioner Ayres said he could not agree that the public interest was served without taking into consideration all evidence in the cases. That evidence, he said, might indicate a different remedy than dismissal based on "unenforceable" agreements.

Four Honored by Medical Society

L. Riddick, Dr. Harry H. Kerr, Jean Hersholt, radio's "Dr. Christian," and Dr. Frederick C. Fishback. The awards were made at the society's annual banquet last night.

Doctors Told Old Drug Aids Hypertension

said, have produced radioactive toads, and radioactivity in growing but isolated hearts of cats, guinea pigs, rabbits and rats.

The society ended its assembly in its annual banquet last night, awarding "certificates for meritorious service" to Jean Hersholt, radio, stage and screen actor, and three District surgeons.

Dr. Freis said his treatment, which also uses diets low in salt content, reduces extremely high blood pressure to safer levels at which the patient can live comfortably and return to normal activities. The drug's role in the treatment was graphically shown in his patients' bloodpressure charts. Taken off the drug and given "placebos," harmless substitute pills, the patients returned promptly to pre-treatment blood-pressure levels.

Dr. Freis said the greatest difficulty in the treatment is regulation of daily dosages of the drug. The patient's own response to the drug varies so that each can expect some toxic reactions several times a month, despite care in dosage control. Fortunately, he said, only the first few weeks are the hardest to control.

Dr. Gelling, who helped develop crystalline insulin, described University of Chicago research with radio active isotopes. Such work, still in basic research stage, promises "unlimited advance" in further purifying drugs and in study of the body's use of drugs, he said.

The local doctors included Drs. Frederick C. Fishback, Harry H. Kerr and Arch L. Riddick, all present or former faculty members of George Washington University School of Medicine.

Dr. Freis, in his report, stressed the narrow margin between benefit and toxic reaction of the old heart drug dosages. These toxic reactions, "which can terrify the doctor as much as the patient," were largely responsible for the drug's fall from favor years ago. Frightening as such reactions are, Dr. Freis added, no death or permanent disability has resulted from the drug's use. Reactions include nausea, vomiting, and, in extreme cases, "a death-like collapse requiring drastic revival methods," he told the doctors.

Among accomplishments so far achieved, he reported, are the development of radioactive plants of species from which many of today's important drugs are obtained, and radioactive secretions from tropical toads. Such toads are made "hot as pistols" by feeding them algae grown in radioactive nutrients, he explained.

Actor Hersholt was chosen for the District Medical Society honor for his radio portrayal of "Dr. Christian," the kindly, old-time practitioner. His citation was broadcast last night over a Nation-wide radio hookup. The "Dr. Christian" program is carried over The Washington Post Station WTOP.

Dr. Fishback, 51, associate professor of surgery at GWU, was cited specifically for his successes in fighting the anti-vivisectionists who would deprive doctors of animals needed for medical research. A graduate of Central High School here and Harvard University Medical School, he has been a member of the GWU faculty since 1929.

Dr. Kerr, 69, of 2400 Tilden st. nw., was honored for his "educational work in the cancer control field." He set up the Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic with funds of the late Randolph T. Warwick and served on the GWU faculty for 41 years, for 16 as clinical professor of surgery.

Dr. Riddick, 55, a native of North Carolina, was chosen for the medical society honor for his pioneering efforts in the establishment of voluntary insurance plans against doctors' bills. He is clinical professor of surgery at GWU, and lives at 2900 Glover dr. nw.

Jersey Synod Is Accepted By Lutherans

DES MOINES, Oct. 4 (AP)—A 35-year goal of New Jersey Lutherans was achieved today when the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America formally accepted the New Jersey synod as the 33d synod of the two-million-member church.

The New Jersey synod, of which the Rev. Edwin H. Knudsen of Trenton is the first president, comprises 78,000 members in 128 congregations that previously belonged to the ministerium of Pennsylvania, the Central Pennsylvania synod and the United synod of New York.

The New Jersey synod completed organization June 20, 1950, and today's convention action completed its recognition by the national church.

The international convention of the church opened with a communion service at which the Rev. F. Eppling Reinartz, secretary, was the celebrant. He was assisted by the Rev. Reno R. Frobenius, St. Joseph, Mo.; the Rev. G. Lawrence Himmelman, Pittsburgh; the Rev. J. Luther Mauney, Marion, Va., and the Rev. Harmon J. McGuire, Chicago. The four are presidents of the Kansas, Pittsburg, Virginia and Illinois synods respectively.

Minimum Pastor Wage Put at $2400

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 4 (AP)—The Pennsylvania conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church agreed today its pastors should get more money and increased by $200 the minimum suggested by the conference superintendent.

The 200 delegates from churches in southern Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia adopted a resolution recommending that ministers should get at least $2400 a year plus $300 annual expense money for their cars.

The Rev. Dr. Paul E. V. Shannon of York, Pa., superintendent of the conference, had recommended $2400 a year including the car allowance.

The conference adjourned to the Peter Kemp farm on the outskirts of Frederick this afternoon to mark the 150th anniversary of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ.

The delegates honored the Rev. Dr. G. I. Rider upon his completion of 41 years as pastor of Grace Church in Hagerstown. Dr. Shannon reported Dr. Rider now has equalled the conference record for service to a single church. It is expected that he will be returned to the charge when the stationing committee makes its report on ministers' assignments tomorrow night.

'Snags' Lewis Case Continued Until Nov. 20

District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday refused to dismiss gambling and conspiracy indictments against 13 associates of William "Snags" Lewis, alleged kingpin of Washington's 100-million-dollar-a-year gambling racket.

A jury was unable to agree when the 13 plus Lewis were tried last November, and the retrial was scheduled to start yesterday.

Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz asked Judge Tamm for a continuance, since all 14 and five others have been extradited to Prince Georges County where they are free on bond on gambling charges stemming from the same March, 1949, raid.

Defense Attorney Myron G. Ehrlich, representing all the defendants except Lewis, opposed the continuance and countered with a motion to dismiss the indictments.

He argued that the Government had continued the case many times when the defense was ready for trial. Never before, he said, has an "asylum State," the District where the men face felony charges, preferred to extradite the men to a State to face misdemeanor charges.

Judge Tamm ordered the case continued until November 20.

Fay Requests Special Judge For Homicides

Assignment of a judge to hear negligent homicide cases only was called for yesterday by United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Thirteen negligent homicides are on the Municipal Court calendar, which is now running two months behind for jury trials.

In a letter to Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court, Fay wrote:

"I feel it is in the interest of the Government and the better administration of justice that I ask you to seriously consider the assignment of a judge to hear negligent homicide cases."

Between 15 and 20 cases are regularly scheduled each day in jury court, Fay explained. Under the present system, some negligent homicide cases take three days to try. On the day after the end of a negligent homicide case, there may be as many as 60 jury cases scheduled for trial.

Lunacy inquisitions, which take precedence over every other jury case in Municipal Court, further delay the calendar, Fay told Judge Barse.

Continued delays, the District Attorney added, make the jurors feel that the case is unimportant. Three of the negligent homicide cases are scheduled for trial this month.

Judge Barse, who has been ill for a week, could not be reached for comment.

HOW HAS G. I. POWER

stalled Russia's plans for a showdown?

As the Korean war races into a new climax, we are reaping the first rewards of victory.

U. S. diplomatic prestige and power skyrocketed to a new high as our G. I.'s raised the flag over Seoul, while Russia's plummeted to a new low for the year. What is the real importance of this latest international upsurge of confidence in U. S. policy and power? In the newest NEWSWEEK—out today—read the answers to these and scores of other vital questions:

Will military conscription become U.S. law?
Is Red China's threat to attack more than a bluff?
Why did Gen. MacArthur consider the Inchon landing a sure thing?

(Answered by Gen. Spaatz in his column)

And here are some vital questions on the home front:

Will wages be frozen?
Is the housing boom over?
Is oil rationing in the cards?

In these times of sudden change, the steadying hand of complete, objective appraisals of events is needed. That is why Newsweek not only gathers the headline but digs deep behind it and explores ahead of it. All developments, no matter how seemingly remote, that bear on the growing world struggle—diplomatic moves, propaganda, military strategy, armament, politics, people, business trends—are carefully pieced together to form a rounded picture.

It is a service in which Newsweek, as the Magazine of News Significance, has never been equalled.

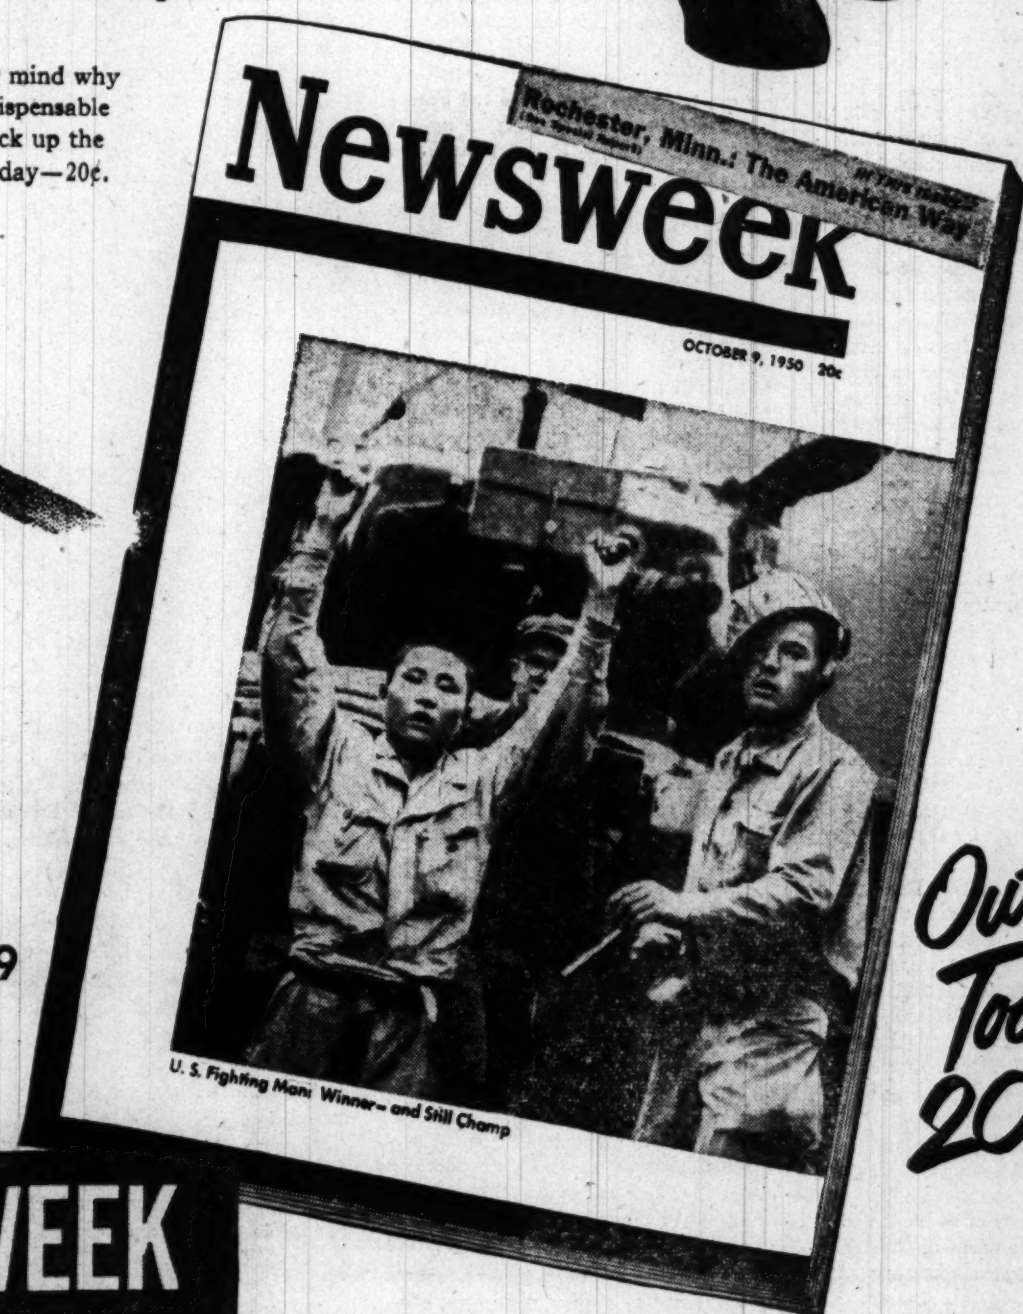

A single session with Newsweek will etch on your mind why Newsweek's news service has become such an indispensable part of the lives and living of so many people. Pick up the current issue from your newsstand. It's on sale today—20¢.

Homemakers Invitation

The Rural Women of the University of Maryland Extension Service have extended an invitation to women of all the foreign embassies and legations in Washington to attend the annual meeting of 33 Montgomery County Homemaker Clubs in Silver Spring next Thursday. The invitation was prompted by generosity; behind it lies a sense that the families of foreign diplomatic personnel in Washington too often are cut off from contact with American families. The Maryland women have held out a hand in friendship believing that they and the women of other countries now living here have much to give to one another. What they have proposed constitutes at the same time, it seems to us, the best possible kind of American propaganda.

Visitors who attend the meeting will learn a great deal about some happy and fulfilling aspects of American life not generally discernible in the ordinary round of official diplomatic activities. There will be an exhibit of various kinds of work done by the homemakers — hand-hooked rugs, lamp shades, refinished furniture and other crafts; there will be a yearly report on the work done by homemaker clubs of the county; there will be a talk on "Care of the Land and What it Means to People of the World." And there will be an informal tea at which the Maryland women hope to get acquainted with their guests and open the door of friendship to them. We hope that many women from abroad will accept the invitation in the warm spirit in which it has been extended. No doubt they will be able to teach our homemakers a good deal about the countries from which they come. No doubt, too, they will learn something about America that will enhance their understanding of this diverse land.

Draft Or Raid?

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, seems to have forgotten the "selective" part of his job. At least, the tenor of his remarks before the Society for Personnel Administration—to the effect that the American people have been sold "a lot of baloney" on the deferment of scientists and professional men—showed slight concern for the concept of the draft as an effort to place men where they can best be used in national service. General Hershey's suggestion to personnel administrators, presumably factious, that they look up "critical occupations" to see whether "fighting man" is listed ignores the fact that this is still, thank heaven, a civilian society. And his comment that because he has a bachelor of science degree he has just as much claim to be called a scientist as many other so-called scientists reduces the discussion to the level of absurdity. It is of a piece with a growing anti-intellectualism which is most dangerous to our security.

To be sure, the country is faced with a nice problem in determining where an individual can be of the most service, and General Hershey's zeal to get enough men to the fighting fronts is commendable. Undoubtedly there have been some attempts by would-be draft-dodgers to take refuge behind a degree. And certainly the natural inclination of scientists to ask deferments for scientists must be taken into account. But that is precisely what Selective Service is for—to formulate standards to guide draft boards in reaching the difficult decisions on where a man is most needed.

What is not possible to equate, as General Hershey seems to do, is the contribution a scientist might make in his profession as against his usefulness on the fighting front. This would be a ridiculous construction of "equality." For example, a young scientist who was able to put the finishing touches on some new weapon would be worth many times what he would be in uniform. There is no partiality for scientists in the realization that in a struggle in which the United States and Western world are vastly outnumbered in military manpower, our hope lies in scientific ingenuity. Indeed, Selective Service already has recognized the need for a broad reservoir of national leadership in the deferment of certain college students.

Some concern is warranted, however, over the diminishing pool of draftable manpower. The armed services have only begun to expand, and when the impetus of the Korean war is over there will be added difficulties in calling up or keeping reservists on duty. Possibly some adjustment in test scores, plus the drafting of veterans with relatively short periods of service, will become necessary. An increase in pay scales also might help voluntary recruitment. But what the country still must come to is a concept of universal service, both military and civilian, in which the period of military training and service for young men will be sufficient to sustain the armed forces at their new level.

Touch And Go

Chinese Communist intentions on Korea are hidden by a total lack of direct information out of China and by an incessant barrage of tendentious propaganda from Nationalist Formosa. No confirmation is available of the widely published report that Chinese Reds are entering North Korea. There is, instead, a back-and-forth movement of North Korean Reds, with convoys made up, no doubt, of Manchurian supplies. With Soviet Russia more or less in control of this frontier, this is Soviet, not Chinese, enterprise; besides the bulk of Soviet overland trade with North Korea goes through Manchuria. It would be incredible if there were Chinese intervention at this penultimate stage in the Korean adventure. The Soviet still cannot want Chinese mixing in Korean affairs. Moreover, Moscow's Korea policy is already bankrupt, and even in Peking, where news of the outside world is scarce, there must be some realization that to try to bail out the Muscovites would be to invite disaster. Any such act would be the answer to Chiang Kai-shek's prayer and would put the Chinese Communists beyond the pale of the United Nations.

It would be truer to say, in our opinion, that the Chinese Communists for their own ends are backing Muscovite efforts to keep the world's nerves on edge. That was doubtless the purpose of the speech last weekend of Chou En-lai, Premier and Foreign Minister, in celebration of the first anniversary of the setting up of the Peking government. Mr. Chou said some harsh things about the United States, some justified, some without foundation; and he made a lot of noises about so-called American aggression. For instance, he applied the charge to American actions in Formosa and in Manchuria. However, in both cases the United States has behaved in accord with traditional Chinese practice in settling disputes. This is to invoke a go-between. Over Formosa the United States has offered to let the matter be dealt with by the United Nations after a hearing of the complaint by the Peking government. Furthermore, General MacArthur has withdrawn his military mission from Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters. The American offer of investigation by a third party or parties on the Manchurian incidents (in which American planes are said to have bombed Manchurian targets) still stands, as well as a pledge of compensation in case the Chinese charge is sustained. Peking seems assured in the long run of cooption on a U. N. Commission appointed to supervise pacification. Here in actual practice is the doctrine of the mean on which the Chinese set such store. If Mr. Chou were to go forward with this procedure, then the way to entry to the United Nations would be paved; instead, he ignores it.

If it be true that the Chou blast is simply an essay in a war of nerves, let Mr. Chou be assured that it is a dud. American opinion has gone beyond that stage. Mr. Chou would be surprised to see the unanimity manifest in this country to take the consequences of its grim decision to stop aggression. It will see it through, come what may, and, as is shown in Korea, with no paper tiger, either. How can he expect to get into the United Nations when he is applauding an aggression against which the United Nations has taken action? He ought to know that he is tearing up the main credential of membership by showing in fact a lack of respect for the world organization and the absence of a peace-loving spirit. Nor will the U. N. compromise with aggression by relating the cease fire to any problem connected with any other country; the problem in Korea will be dealt with on its merits. So will the China problem. Mr. Chou ought to realize that it takes two parties to settle a dispute, and his speech is calculated by its intransigence merely to widen the gulf.

Minus One

To the sorrow of many and the surprise of few the Yankees took the opening game of the 1950 World Series. But it is a melancholy satisfaction to those who love to see the mighty humbled and the lowly exalted that even the Yankees were obliged to take it by practices relatively unfamiliar to the regular customers of the American League parks. In the fourth inning their Mr. Brown achieved the only extra base hit of the game, and since it happened with nobody out, they were able to wangle him home with a pair of outfield flies. And that, if we may say so, was obliging Mr. Stengel to play it very close to the zipper of his windbreaker.

In a way, Mr. Sawyer's choice of Mr. Konstanty as his starting pitcher—which, according to our Mr. Povich, shocked and staggered the baseball savants—was vindicated. The tall, and spectacled Mr. Konstanty, who somehow manages, even in a baseball suit, to resemble a benighted Benedictine abbot in a shovel hat, did well enough to win a half dozen ordinary games. Unhappily for him and for Professor Sawyer, Mr. Vic Raschi did even better. Where Mr. Konstanty in eight innings held the Yankees to four hits, keeping such powerful batsmen as Messrs. DiMaggio, Mize, and Berra impotent throughout, Mr. Raschi in nine permitted only a pair of singles, by Messrs. Jones and Seminick, respectively.

And so on the eve of the second game the odds on the Yankees to win the series continue to rise and the odds against their doing so in four consecutive games go down. The Phillies seem to be contending not merely against the Yankees, but against the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. Since the beginning of last month they seem to have been visited by all the plagues of Egypt, and perhaps a few that the Egyptians missed. Their great money batter, Mr. Nicholson—a mediocrity at most times but almost invincible in the clutch—went down with diabetes. Their infant prodigy, Mr. Simmons, was snatched away from Mr. Sawyer's tender bosom by minions of Mars, leaving Mr. Sawyer without any left-hander more reliable than Mr. Ken Heintzelman. Another of their young pitching prodigies, Mr. Church, while in the process of winning a game had his face pushed back toward second base by a hard line drive.

On Tuesday evening the military—who all along had been taking the attitude that while Mr. Simmons might be a hero in Philadelphia, he was just another guy named Joe to the Twenty-eighth Division—suddenly changed their minds. They announced (in the ineffable manner of military men for which the Greeks also had a name), that Mr. Simmons was being granted a furlough, so that he could get in there and work for the glory and honor of the sovereign Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. That, no doubt, made things a bit pleasanter for Bugler Simmons; but it was of no help whatever to Mr. Sawyer, for both the series and his furlough will be over before Mr. Simmons can get himself back into condition.

The Spiral Moves On

Air Force Undersecretary John McCone has picked a dramatic way of illustrating the problem of galloping inflation that confronts us all. Price rises between April and September, he told a House Armed Services Subcommittee, have lessened Air Force purchasing power by the equivalent of 750 F-86 jet fighter planes. In other words, to purchase the 4428 new planes programmed for this year will cost 7 to 8 percent more than anticipated, or from 215 to 360 million dollars additional.

Nor is the full impact of inflation to date reflected in these figures. Another official cited increases of 128.9 percent in the price of crude rubber, 32.9 percent in tin and 23.6 percent in copper. Obviously such increases will have a drastic effect on the purchase of such items as signal wire. These and comparable increases will be magnified in many ways as the Army embarks on its plan to add another division and the Air Force advances toward its goal of 60 groups by 1953 and talks of an ultimate 95 groups. And as Congress votes more money, which it must do to carry out defense plans, the inflationary effect of deficit financing will be compounded.

There is, to be sure, some slight solace in the Bureau of Labor Statistics wholesale price index, which showed a drop of four tenths of a point—from 169.8 to 169.4—for the week ended September 26 as compared with September 19. But wholesale prices are still 8 percent above pre-Korea and 11.2 percent above last year. Moreover, this index is an average, and it reflects only indirectly the sharp inflationary increases in specific commodities needed by the military. Furthermore, the last available cost of living statistics are for mid-August, when there had not yet been time for retail prices to show the full rise at the wholesale level. It is the pinch at the retail level, of course, that concerns the public most directly and leads to demands for wage increases. However, it may be noted that between August 15 and September 15 the Bureau of Agricultural Economics index for farm prices received jumped from 267 to 272 and is now 25 points above a year ago. Substantial increases have been registered in the price of cotton, cottonseed oil, dairy products and fruits; average farm prices are now at 105 percent of parity.

Altogether there is no ground for either reassurance or complacency in this picture, especially since the main impact of the price rises is yet to be felt. Inflation is the battle of the home front. It would be tragic indeed to win the battle in Korea only to lose it on the home front.

Political Businessman

Following close on the heels of the Nobel Peace Award, the Moscow Literary Gazette has announced its fall list of "enemies of humanity." As a charter member of this once select group, The Washington Post notes with pleasure the inclusion of Mr. Henry Wallace's name and welcomes him warmly to the ranks. Mr. Wallace won admission as the result of rather conspicuous right-wing deviationism immediately following the outbreak of the Korean war. He indulged in a warmongering observation to the effect that he was on the side of the United States and the United Nations. The Moscow magazine cited him, therefore, as a "political businessman" and even included him, along with John Dos Passos, in a list of writers and cultural figures whom it designated "Truman lackeys." Whether or not Mr. Wallace genuinely deserves the latter accolade only Mr. Truman can say; we are disposed to be skeptical. But the Literary Gazette is never niggardly in its denigration.

Without wishing to disparage Mr. Wallace in any way, we admit to a certain degree of anxiety about contemporary criteria for admission to the Literary Gazette's blacklist. In the old days, when we first became members, the group was as exclusive as, say, the Aqua Velva after-shave club, and membership carried with it a certain cachet that seemed to us rather agreeable. We are not snobs and we have no desire to exclude anyone on mere grounds of birth and breeding or because he may at one time in the past have been a common man. But the Literary Gazette does seem to be letting the bars down to a point where anyone at all can join the club for the asking. If it does not watch its step, it will soon find that it has included among the "enemies of humanity" virtually all humans.

Letters To The Editor

Ugly Apartments

In a recent book The Curtain Isn't Iron by Joseph C. Harsch, he brings out that in the city of Helsinki which last he visited in 1949, the people are concerned about the beauty of their community, that good architecture extends to the factories and to the inexpensive apartment houses for workers and he concludes with the statement that "There is virtually no sordid or careless ugliness in Helsinki."

What a contrast this picture presents to that offered by our own City of Washington, proclaimed as the most beautiful of cities, but where, just recently, a myriad of apartment houses have sprung up, not only in commercialized areas but in good residential districts, which do not possess a single redeeming feature in pleasing architectural design, but on the contrary stand out in their bold drabness as hideous and depressing monuments to the greed of those who built them in order to exploit a condition of housing shortage.

What a great service The Washington Post would render the city if it sponsored a movement which would prevent further atrocities of the type referred to from further disfigurement of the Nation's Capital.

"Deserted" Chiang

It is not simply "Chiang's political hide" we are asked to save, but the concept which we, as a Nation, formed under the Hay Doctrine, in 1900, that Chinese territory should not be invaded by any aggressor, whether he do so directly, or through so-called "harmless agrarians."

If "Arlington Resident" (letter published October 1) examined the record he would find that Chiang never asked us for a single man. All that Chiang wanted was credit with which to buy ammunition to shoot in the guns we had turned over to him from World War II surplus. These guns, by the way, were not a gift, but in payment for food and materials which our forces, fighting in China during World War II, had commandeered from the Chinese.

The story is a la "Arlington Resident" is a sad, sad one. Riding out of the world, with billions of dollars of our economic and military aid, Chiang is suddenly faced with an "insurrection." This movement had practically no outside backing goes the story which "Arlington Resident" has learned from the Stittwell Papers. Thunder out of China and Professor Fairbanks, all authors well calculated to keep in confusion as to what really happened. "If Chiang ran out of anything it was men" goes the well learned story of what really happened according to the sources in which "Arlington Resident" so implicitly believes.

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Formosa over to them without a struggle and ditching Chiang, (b) embark upon a comprehensive "Point 4" plan to rehabilitate Red China by building up her industries so that she may eventually fight us more effectively.

Dognapping

This is the occasion for consideration of our pets and their needs, rather than a time for exploiting them. All over the country dognapping is going on at a greater degree than ever before. This month I heard of friends living on the opposite sides of the city who both lost their purebred collies the same day. One that was chained, had its collar cut off and left behind.

Pets are also stolen in Maryland and Virginia. Cats also are disappearing.

Why is it not against the law for laboratories to purchase beautiful pets in perfect health from any bum or boy claiming he has a stray or unwanted animal?

General Assembly Powers

May I point out a basic inconsistency from the standpoint of international law and the United Nations Charter, in connection with the recently proposed program to give to the General Assembly certain powers with regard to the maintenance of peace and security.

The gist of the proposals may be summed up as follows: In any dispute which results in armed aggression when the Security Council is tied up by a veto, the General Assembly would be called into action immediately. A veto does not apply in the Assembly and by a two-thirds majority vote, it would commit certain pre-picked armed forces, of those nations that were willing, to restore peace and security.

The entire plan is legally inadmissible, and the Charter is quite explicit on the matter. 1. The plan envisages a previous submission of the problem to the Security Council, and it is assumed, say that an enforcement order of the Council is vetoed, (probably by Malik) and is then submitted to the General Assembly for action. Article 12 of the Charter says as follows: "While the Security Council is exercising with respect to any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests." The possibility that the Security Council would make such a request is remote, but even in that event the very question of making a request is vetoable, since the request is subject to the rule of unanimity. 2. It has been suggested that the proposals are or can be based on Article 51, the so-called "self-defense" clause which gives the right to collective as well as individual self-defense. This is true, but if the basis for the new proposed arrangements is Article 51 and that is the justification which will be used by the new arrangement in the General Assembly, then two things become apparent: (a) The arrangement is unnecessary because Article 51 is an es-

"The Barrier"

The closing performance of "The Barrier" on September 30, ironically enough, played to a house approximately 70 per cent full. When the performance ended, there was overwhelming applause. The ovation demanded at least seven curtain calls.

It is unsafe to venture too far into the probable causes for this. The performance was impressive. The plot, honestly based and uncompromising, was moving and direct, and certainly not incredibly so. It was tragic that the "bastard" Negro son of the Southern white colonel found slaying his father and killing himself the last resorts to preserving the idea of individual freedom. The cast was capable and convincing and succeeded in maintaining an atmosphere of interest and attention throughout the play. The music, though not melodious or indelible on the memory, seemed adapted to the tense and highly serious nature of the drama.

It was inevitable that so controversial a theme would have aroused noxious feelings and animosity for the play among some of the Washington public, and in part account for slack attendance. But this is no discredit to the play. It is sometimes healthy to take skeletons out of the closet and examine them.

CHARLOTTE P. DODSON.
Washington.

General Assembly Powers

cape clause to which any nation or group of nations can resort any time. Article 51 specifically makes mandatory the report of such self-defense to the Security Council, which automatically places it on the Council agenda. 3. It has been proposed that the new international military contingents be at the disposal of the General Assembly, subject to the willingness of the contributing nations as to their use in each individual case. This is a very loose arrangement, but the only one possible under the Charter since any formal arrangement is only possible under Articles 43-50 between the Security Council and the individual nations and not between any other organ of the U. N.

It should be pointed out that in the entire Chapter VII of the Charter, which is concerned with the problem of "Action with respect to threats to the peace, breaches and acts of aggression," etc., the words "General Assembly" are not mentioned even once, and the opening paragraph of the first article in this chapter clearly states (39) "The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace . . . and shall make recommendations or decide what measures shall be taken etc. . . ."

By comparison, though the General Assembly may debate anything, and make recommendations on anything, it is specifically enjoined in the Charter twice not to make recommendations on any dispute or situation which the Security Council has on its agenda (Articles 12 and 14). It is my opinion that change could be achieved only by an amendment to the Charter which requires the concurrence of the permanent members of the Security Council. STEVEN P. NAGEL, III.
Washington.

Editor's note: This correspondent seems to overlook the fact that the Assembly is free to make recommendations bearing upon the maintenance of peace and security as soon as the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Administration And Inflation

By Mark Sullivan

Wage Encouragement

THE COUNTRY is in a racing inflation; the spirit of a race runs throughout it. Union leaders race to make sure that they be not left behind—when one of them gets a raise, others feel they must demand an equal or greater raise, lest they lose faith with their unions. Labor leaders with a group race to demand raises, with an eye on the possibility that the Administration may use the power Congress gave it to put ceilings on wages; they race to beat the gun of possible Administration action. Labor as a group races with agriculture for a wage raise; and cost of living, the major factor in which is food, increases as a result of the operation of Government price support of farm crops. After labor has received a wage raise, and the wage raise has been followed by an increase in the cost of manufactured goods, the Department of Agriculture uses the increased prices paid by farmers for manufactured goods as the base for a new increase in the prices at which the Government supports farm crops.

The inflation presently raging is not a result of the Korean war. The part the war has in it is merely as an acceleration of an inflation that was already strongly under way and was certain to grow worse. Unless this is understood, the war may become a cover-up for deeper causes and may divert the minds of the people from right policies and actions now needed.

THE POSTWAR inflation began with policies adopted by the Truman Administration after the war ended. One broad policy was that the purchasing power of the country should be increased. Increase of purchasing power as a policy to be carried out by Government was uncalculated for and dangerous, for purchasing power at the end of the war was already enormous and contained in itself the danger of inflation.

Within the broad purpose of increasing purchasing power, was a specific policy of encouraging wage raises. Official promulgations of this policy by President Truman and others in the Administration were usually accompanied by a qualification. Wage rates should be "noninflationary"—they should not be accompanied by increases in prices of goods. Sometimes the qualification was that the wage raises should be paid by industry out of profits. In a very limited number of cases this might have been done.

But the Administration's qualifications quickly succumbed to practical fact. In industry after industry wage raises took place as a result of demands by labor unions often accompanied by strikes. And in industry after industry the wage raises were accompanied or followed by increases in prices. This was bound to be, and the Administration itself had to recognize it. After the union of steelworkers had struck for a wage raise and got one, President Truman announced an increase of $5 a ton in the price of steel. From early 1946 on, there was a parallel parade of wage raises accompanied or followed by price increases.

THE EARLY Administration policy of increase of the country's purchasing power as a Government objective was repeated during the mild business recession that took place in 1949. This time the policy was called increase of the country's "national income." Mr. Truman, in an address at Pendleton, Ore., in May, and on other occasions, took pride in and credit for an increase of 100 billion dollars in the national income that had taken place during the preceding 10 years; and promised another 100 billion-dollar increase as the Administration's "goal" for the coming 10 years.

In the term "national income" as used by Mr. Truman, some 20 percent or so of sound fact is made to support some 80 percent of fallacy. There can be and always has been some increase in national income due to sound causes—increases of population, increase in number of persons at work, improvement in industrial methods and the like. These are economically sound, they result in increased production of goods.

But of the increase in national income that took place during the 10 years preceding 1949, a large part was a mere marking up of wages and prices. Far from being an increase in the production of goods, many of the postwar demands for increased wage rates were phrased by labor spokesmen as "50 hours pay for 40 hours work." And Mr. Truman's proclama on of another 100 billion increase as a "goal" for the next 10 years was an expression of tolerance for, indeed an invitation to, further marking up of wages and prices. This began quickly and was strongly under way before Korea came. It is a basic mechanism of the present advance in inflation.

The present stage of inflation, like any advanced stage of any poison or other destructive force, contains cumulative momentum, brings nearer the danger of catastrophe.

Combating Prejudice

Evidently, Mr. Merton Curllis, whose letter appeared on October 3, hasn't heard that we have a United Nations, whose job it is to promote peace and good will among all peoples, to give to all individuals their rights of freedom. Clear-minded people are doing all they can to break up prejudice because now we know, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." No, prejudice is not here to stay, as he asserted. JAMES HOWARD

By Walter Lippmann

Soviet Korean Policy

AT THIS STAGE it may be useful to have another look at the Soviet thesis about Korea. The thesis was first stated by Mr. Gromyko within 10 days of the attack last June. During the month of August Mr. Malik used it remorselessly and tediously to fill in time while he waited for the news, which never came, that the Americans had been driven into the sea. Last week Mr. Vishinsky returned to the same thesis once again.

The thesis is (1) that the South Koreans, incited by the United States in the person of John Foster Dulles, attacked at the thirty-eighth parallel on June 25; and (2) that the North Koreans are waging a legitimate civil war, like the American war of 1861, to unify their country by force. None of the Soviet spokesmen has ever shown any embarrassment because the two arguments contradict one another, and their imperviousness to logic has led to a widespread belief that the whole business is nothing but the propaganda device, of which Hitler was the great exponent, generally called "the big lie."

MY OWN view is that the first part of the thesis—namely that Mr. Dulles was sent to Seoul to start the war—is an outright and preposterous fabrication, and that Messrs. Gromyko, Malik, and Vishinsky know it is. They know quite well and their papers have gloated over it, how I am entitled to be surprised were the South Korean army and the American forces in Japan. They know also, in circumstantial detail, how all the responsible American authorities had to improvise when the unpleasant news, which spoiled all their summer holiday plans, reached them.

It is the civil war thesis which is worth looking at again. It has served several purposes. In the first victorious push down the peninsula, the Soviet insistence that this was a civil war was patently designed to obstruct, slow up, and limit the intervention of the United Nations. When Mr. Gromyko and Mr. Malik used the civil war argument, they believed that the North Koreans would win if the intervention was too little and too late.

BUT NOW, with the invasion defeated and the first phase of the struggle just about ended, what shall we make of Mr. Vishinsky's resort to this thesis? Why in the face of an Assembly which has rejected overwhelmingly the claim that this is a civil war, and is recorded as believing that this was a case of naked international aggression, does Mr. Vishinsky repeat the argument? One can think of at least two reasons: the first is that the argument is useful in explaining to the North Koreans and to all the other satellite states why the Soviet Union did not intervene but let the North Koreans go down to disastrous defeat; the other is to lay the basis for a continuation of the Korean struggle by guerrilla tactics.

MR. GROMYKO's use of the civil war thesis, on which the Soviet Foreign Office has obviously done a little research, is interesting in the light of the military behavior of the Soviet Union since then. A most remarkable thing about the Korean campaign has been the rigorous nonintervention of the Soviet forces. Though undoubtedly they sent in munitions and gave advice, they left our Air Force and Navy entirely unopposed, and, once the limited North Korean armor had been used up, they did not replenish it.

All this suggests that in their dealings with the North Korean authorities before the war began, the Russians laid it down firmly and emphatically that their own commitment would be strictly and even successively limited—that when the fighting started, the North Koreans would be on their own, and that they must not call upon the Soviet government to rescue them. Even in their direct straits it is noteworthy that the North Koreans have addressed no public appeal to the Soviet government for help.

North Korea, we must remember, has no military alliance with the Soviet Union. Thus in Peiping, Warsaw, Prague, Budapest, Sofia, Bucharest, the Soviet Union is in a position to point out that from the beginning they have insisted that this was a civil war in which big powers cannot intervene, and that that is why they did not help the North Koreans more.

WHETHER this will impress, even if it does not reassure, the satellites is another question. At least it rationalizes for them and for the world as well the fact that the Soviet Union's policy is at present to limit its commitments well short of the risks of war which would involve the use of force.

But in addition this thesis bears importantly on what appears to be coming in Korea—that long, confused period of struggle which, unless it can be ended by diplomatic agreement with Russia and China, will almost certainly require large occupation and police forces for a very long time to come. If this underground struggle in the mountains, the villages, and the back alleys can be defined in Asia as a civil war—like the Indo-Chinese—it may be exceedingly difficult for the U. N. to find Asian powers to establish law and order while Korea is being unified and reconstructed.

High Court Ruling Carried Out By Injunction on Realty Fees

The Washington Real Estate Board was enjoined yesterday from fixing real estate brokerage fees.

The injunction, signed by Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court, follows a decision in the case by the Supreme Court last May. The injunction applies to all members of the real estate board.

As to the effect of the order on the prices the public will pay, there was disagreement.

According to William E. Leahy, the real estate men's lawyer, the injunction will result in little or no change.

"It might increase the cost the public will pay. The public always pays in the end," Leahy said. On the other hand, Assistant Attorney General William A. Underhill is confident the public will benefit.

"Real estate brokerage commission rates in the District have been substantially increased in recent years," he said. "Under the final judgment entered today these rates will now be determined by competition, which should result in lower rates."

Under the injunction judgment, the Justice Department gets reasonable access to the files of the board to see that terms of the court order are carried out. But the prosecutors are forbidden to make an unauthorized disclosure of the records.

The terms of the order nullify a schedule of commissions and rates charged by board members here prior to 1947 when the general investigation of the case was made. The real estate men can agree, however, on division of commissions on certain transactions.

Most exacting is a provision of the injunction forbidding as few as two board members from combining to fix rates. Also, parts of the code of ethics of the board are voided.

The injunction case against the real estate board was brought under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, charging that there was a conspiracy to fix brokerage fees in the District in restraining trade and commerce.

The Justice Department had brought civil and criminal action against both the local and the National Associations of Real Estate Boards and certain members.

The criminal suits were dismissed and Judge Holtzoff also dismissed the injunction and declaratory judgment suits against the defendants. However, the Supreme Court reversed him on the local civil case, thus making the injunction issuance mandatory.

Aid is to be provided on the maximum scale that Berlin industry can absorb.

Unemployment here is roughly 300,000 out of a labor force of less than 1,200,000. Part of this can be traced to industry dismantling, part to the city's loss of its former role as capital. Berliners seen reluctant to leave their city even though they might be better off economically elsewhere.

Crime Inquiry At Chicago Opens Today

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (AP)—The Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee opens a two-day secret session tomorrow against a backdrop of a murdered witness and the flight of some of the Nation's top crime overlords to escape subpoenas.

Making a long-awaited appearance in the city that spawned much of modern-day organized crime in the days of Al Capone, the committee will hold closed hearings tomorrow and Friday in the United States Courthouse.

It was in the courthouse in 1931 that Scarface Al was sentenced for income tax evasion, ending his fabulous career as the kingpin of the underworld.

The committee hopes to establish that from the ashes of the old Capone mob came powerful "syndicates" of crime with linkups over the Nation and holding sway over gambling, vice and other enterprises.

Committee agents, however, disclosed that the closed hearings probably will accomplish only the "spadework" for the inquiry, and that open meetings will be held later.

Three members of the five-man committee, Senators Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) and Herbert O'Connor (D., Md.) are scheduled to participate.

On September 25 detective William Drury, former police lieutenant and crime crusader who was expected to give important information to the committee, was slain from ambush. It was believed gangland took the one sure way to stop him from testifying.

In addition, Robinson and his aides soon found that many of those named in their subpoenas were not around to be served.

Tony Accardo, reputed boss of the Chicago syndicate, fled to Mexico, where the committee is seeking the aid of the Mexican government, as well as the United States State Department, in getting him back. Jack Guzik, business agent of the syndicate and one-time Capone lieutenant, also was missing.

But the roll of about 30 who were served included Ralph (Bottles) Capone and Matt Capone, two brothers of Al who are not rated as big wheels in present day operations.

D. C. Crime Lawyer To Advise Mrs. Fischetti

Mrs. Anna Fischetti, wife of a cousin of the late gangster Al Capone, will be represented before the Kefauver Crime Committee in Chicago today by Charles E. Ford, Washington lawyer.

Fischetti, himself described as the kingpin in the gang of former Capone associates who dominate Chicago mob affairs, cannot be found by committee investigators.

Ford said yesterday that Mrs. Fischetti was an old friend. He said she had been subpoenaed at her home in Miami. Her husband is reportedly in Mexico, Ford said.

The local criminal lawyer told reporters before he left for Chicago that a woman cannot be made to testify against her husband either in criminal cases or before such investigating bodies as the Kefauver committee.

Officer Held, Legal Hostage, In Bribery Quiz

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—A policeman was held as a legal hostage today while his brother, a former officer, talked with a Brooklyn grand jury probing gambling payoffs to crooked cops.

As the witness, James E. Reardon, left the grand jury room after two hours, Assistant District Attorney Julius Helfand said:

"I received interesting information from James Reardon which may prove to be of vital importance to me."

In a squeeze play to force Reardon to talk, Kings County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz earlier sentenced his older brother, Patrolman Michael Reardon, Jr., to 30 days in jail and fined him $250 for contempt.

But the judge held up the jail commitment while James Reardon was before the jury. Then he set Michael Reardon free until Monday, at Helfand's request.

Leibowitz told Michael Reardon, 40, yesterday that he would be held unless he could get his 33-year-old brother to tell what he knows about police grafters who were wine, dined and paid off by bookmakers.

The two brothers talked things over but gave no sign as to what agreement they had reached.

The Reardons attended a 1947 house party thrown by Boss Bookie Harry Gross, head of a 20-million-dollar gaming ring that paid a million dollars a year for police protection.

Michael Reardon told the grand jury he saw at least 10 other policemen there—some of them top brass. But he said he was too drunk to recall their names.

His asserted inability to remember brought him a contempt-of-court citation, and Leibowitz sentenced him today.

Korea Occupation Personnel to Meet At Meade Reunion

FORT MEADE, Md., Oct. 4 (AP)—Soldiers and civilians who served in the Army that occupied Korea after World War II will reunite here Saturday.

It's second annual reunion of the United States Armed Forces in Korea Association. Its members are military and civilian personnel who served in Korea prior to the outbreak of present hostilities.

Top tiered the business agenda is the working out of a memorial for Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery in Korea. Dean is still missing.

It is reported the memorial may be in the form of an education fund for children of soldiers killed in the Korean conflict.

Stassen's Letter to Stalin

Following is the text of a letter from Harold E. Stassen to Premier Stalin, discussing steps toward world peace:

It is now 3½ years since I talked with you in a conference at the Kremlin at the conclusion of which you informally invited me to confer again in the future. I write to you now, as I spoke then, as a private citizen of the United States and as a member of the party which is not now in power in the administration of the country.

I write to you now, as I spoke then, in the interest of world peace and freedom of progress for mankind; and not to influence your government in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States, which are entirely in the hands of our every one of the things I said officials.

As you may realize, each and to you about the United States in 1947, in the discussion which was published then throughout both countries, has proved to be true and correct.

The United States has not had the economic crash of depression which your advisers were saying would come and which I said would not come.

U. S. Economy Unlike Hitler's

The United States has demonstrated that its economic system is different from Hitler's economic system and not like it, as you indicated.

The total United States world trade has not been more than 12 percent, has not increased to 20 percent as you indicated it would, and has not been profitable but has been financed by loans and European recovery grants.

The failure to agree on international control of atomic energy for peace has increased world tensions and bitterness.

The Soviet Union's continued barring of opportunities for the American people—including students and tourists—to visit Russia and its continued censorship of the American press correspondents has added to misunderstanding.

On the other hand, you stated in our discussion that the Soviet Union desired world peace.

I also say to you that if your advisers tell you that the American people are divided and quarrelling with each other and that this will weaken the United States, they are wrong. None of our quarrels or differences will affect the united armament effort, the united production, or the united mobilization of our country.

Can't Undermine U. S.

If your advisers tell you that the Communist organizations in this country can undermine our economic and military strength, they are wrong. Just as rapidly as Communist members show such intentions, they will find American labor and the American people quickly overcoming them.

If your advisers tell you that our young men will not go back into uniform and fight they are wrong. Much as they dislike war, the young men of the United States, veterans and non-veterans, will go into uniform in any numbers necessary to join with other members of the United Nations to defend the peace-desiring nations of the world and to thoroughly defeat anyone who starts a third world war.

Cites USSR Aggressions

I find it impossible to reconcile the statement with the North Korean aggression, with the Soviet Union's refusal to cooperate in stopping that aggression, with the Soviet Union's rearmament of Eastern Germany and with other recent actions of the Soviet Union. I have spoken of these developments and of what they mean to the American people in an address on August 15, 1950.

I therefore write to you this personal message in an effort to stop the drift toward war and to change the direction of world actions instead toward peace and human progress. The Soviet Union's direction will be judged not by words or documents, but by actions.

To this end, I say to you that if your advisers are now telling you that the United States will have an economic failure if forced to carry on a long rearmament program, they are wrong again. I am certain that if it must be done, the United States can match Soviet rearmament for 10 or 20 years, or indefinitely, without an economic failure.

Our labor, our industrialists, our farmers, all of our people in our free society under our modern people's capitalism, have learned more and more about production methods and they can accomplish miraculous results.

If your advisers tell you that the United States must attack the Soviet Union without provocation they are wrong. If neither the Soviet Union nor any of the other Communist states associated with it, commit aggression, the people of the United States would never support or permit the waging of war against the Soviet Union. The American people continue to feel friendly toward the Russian people and still remember the great sacrifices and heroic fighting of the Russian armies in our joint victories over Hitler's Nazi forces.

Urges Policy Change

I therefore write to you to urge that you change the policy of the Soviet Union and move toward world peace and freedom for mankind. I urge that you stop attacking the churches in the Balkans. I urge that you open your borders to tourists and merchants and students and increase the freedom of the peoples of all nationalities within the Communist-governed countries. I urge that you join in rewriting and strengthening the United Nations Charter.

If you do move toward peace and freedom, much can be accomplished through the cooperation of our countries to improve the living conditions of the people in both the rest of the world. If you do not, the rearmament programs throughout the world will add a burden of suffering and hardship on the backs of millions of innocent peoples, and the world tensions and dangers of war will increase.

If you doubt any of the things I say to you, I believe that I can prove each point to you with much evidence, either through correspondence or further conferences, with the understanding that everything we both said would be openly and publicly released to the people as our previous conversation was released, and as this message will be released to the people within a few days.

Stassen Writes Stalin Asking Personal Parley in Peace Bid

ference in Moscow Stassen said he had delivered a copy of his letter to Stalin at the State Department on Monday. He emphasized, however, that his project was wholly unofficial.

The State Department expressed no objection to Stassen's move. Press Officer Michael McDermott told reporters, as Stassen had earlier, that the department knew nothing about the matter prior to Monday.

"I understand the letter was sent in Mr. Stassen's private capacity," McDermott said. "It had no official inspiration."

He said if the proposed mission to Moscow should come off, there was "no doubt whatever" about Stassen getting a passport.

Stassen, talking to reporters, said that if he got the chance to talk to Stalin and members of the Politburo, he would take along "four or five top citizen leaders of the United States." He wouldn't identify any of the people he had in mind, but said that one was a publisher.

He said, in answer to a question, that his move could be taken as an "implied criticism" of the Truman Administration for not following out a proposal he made in February for a "Mid-Century Conference" of American and Soviet leaders to stave off an atomic race and a third world war.

Stassen, replying to another question, said he did not think he would be working at cross-purposes with official policy toward Russia.

In his February speech in Grand Rapids, Mich., in which he suggested a conference of American and Russian leaders, Stassen said it ought to include Stalin and at least four members of the Politburo. On the American side, he said, it ought to include President Truman, the Secretaries of State and Defense, Gen. Omar Bradley, Senators Vandenberg and Taft, Bernard M. Baruch and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Stassen said a flood of letters poured in on him after this speech, including one from a disabled Marine who wanted to know what he personally was going to do for world peace. These letters, he explained, provided the "push" for his latest project. He said he had talked it over with a good many people, including university presidents and Republicans in Congress. Asked if he had conferred with General Eisenhower, who is president of Columbia University, Stassen said he had talked to him about "elements of the world situation" but not about his specific proposal.

When Stassen talked to Stalin in 1947, he found the Russian dictator much beguiled by what he had read of a possible economic bust in the United States. Stassen recalled this in writing to the Generalissimo this week. He reminded him that all the things he told him in '47 had proved to be true and correct.

"The United States," he wrote, "has not had the economic crash or depression which your advisers were saying would come and which I said would not come."

Stassen said he was taking leave from his duties at the University of Pennsylvania, and would start out in mid-November for Asia, travelling by plane. He said his expenses would be paid by one of the "major foundations" in this country.

President Is Amused

By Stassen Proposal

ABOARD THE YACHT COMMANDER, with President Truman, Oct. 4 (AP)—President Truman took a philosophical attitude today toward Harold E. Stassen's proposal for a personal peace conference with Soviet Premier Josef Stalin.

But the President was more amused than anything else about the two-time GOP presidential contender's bid for a face-to-face talk with the Soviet leader.

'Born to Be Bad' Is Aptly Titled

By Richard L. Coe

"BORN TO BE BAD" certainly was.

Keith's new arrival is a weary mishmash, the pitch of which lies in the writing credits: "Screen play by Edith Sommer from an adaptation by Charles Schnee of Anne Parish's novel 'All Kneeling' with additional dialogue by Robert Soderberg and George Oppenheimer."

Naturally, so scattered a bloodline isn't likely to lead to anything more than a factory-belt picture. It purportedly gives Joan Fontaine the chance to play a selfish, conniving woman, but this is so quickly established that all that's left to be said is, "So what?"

Added to the obvious phonicness of the script are the lush, lavish settings. The apartment of Joan Leslie, who's playing the poor little office worker of a publishing firm, rivals anything that ever flamed Flair.

It's got a view of San Francisco that would set you back a couple of hundred a month in rent. There's wall-to-wall carpeting and one of those extra-length telephones for which the phone company will set even poor little secretaries back a good wad. There are handsomely framed paintings all over the place and the furniture would take any reasonably employed worker years of installment planning.

Miss Leslie is happily engaged to marry Big Rich, Bachelor Zachary Scott when Miss Fontaine crashes her apartment a day ahead of schedule. She's going to take over the Leslie job with the publishing house, since Harold Vermilyea is her uncle. Part of the Leslie life is Robert Ryan, a struggling author, and Mel Ferrer, a ditto painter, an example of whose works at a one-man show reveal he has captured roughly 20 schools of painting.

Miss Fontaine proceeds to lift Scott from Miss Leslie, via tricks a child of 6 would recognize; she also dangles with Ryan, who finally objects to being anyone's kept man. By the time it's over, things are a bit straightened out, though for all her evil and the Code's requirements that such be punished, Miss Fontaine is apparently free to continue her predatory galle.

What makes all this so wrackingly unpalatable is the fact that its makers presumably think anyone will find it remotely believable or entertaining. Its nauseating insistence on money and material things while at the same time mouthing contempt for such; its shallow view of creative people—the writer and the artist—and its wholly impossible idea of the way people live, all add up to reveal how far from life exist these California movie-makers.

The further irony is that, to people responsible for such gook as "Born to Be Bad," such remarks as these might as well be writ in Sanskrit. Or sand.

LILY JAMES, FAMOUS MODEL TELLS ALL!

I was a small-town girl from Kansas with dreams of being a model in New York.

I applied at a famous model agency and they said: "Let's see your legs!" They liked what they saw.

I got the job and Mary, a has-been model, confided her trade secrets, introduced me to important men...

I posed for famous artists... sometimes in silky negligees, other times in a Paris gown!

I lived the gilded, glamorous life of a party-girl and went out on many exciting dates... to cocktail parties and penthouses.

Then I met Steve. It was a hide-away love affair... between heaven and heartbreak.

See what happens to alluring Lily James in M-G-M's fascinating behind-the-scenes drama!

Area Industry At Boom Rate, Bank Reports

By S. Oliver Goodman

Industrial production in the Fifth Federal Reserve District is rising at a rapid rate this autumn. Latest figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond gave these highlights in various fields:

Cotton textile mills have sold the output of goods and yarns for the rest of 1930 and there has been some business in print cloth and sheetings well into 1931. Employment in the industry has been rising and the mills probably will go to a three-shift basis if they can obtain the manpower.

Bituminous coal output, figures through August indicated, advanced to 22 percent more than a year ago.

Furniture factories in the area are still going at capacity. Despite a possible cutback in home building, new housing will be completed in large volume for the rest of the year and furniture demand should continue at a high level.

Lumber sawmills have been unusually active in recent months. Demand has been "extremely heavy" and prices of southern pine moved to new high ground before some easing occurred in late September.

Cigarette output has responded to the general rise in business activity, due more to inventory accumulation by wholesalers and retailers than to any marked change at the consumer level. Cigarette prices have been raised, and with tobacco costs also at new high levels, further price advances may come.

The Fifth District, which includes Washington, leads the Nation in manufacture of cotton textiles and cigarettes, and ranks near the top in furniture making. The district, in addition to D. C. includes Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

FOR THE THIRSTY: Retail price of Coca-Cola remains at 5 cents a bottle in the Washington area, despite reports of a boost to 10 cents in some regions. The Wall Street Journal yesterday reported a bottle in Alexandria, Va., had boosted prices. The paper apparently meant Alexandria, La.

PROMOTIONS: Rodney Harman has been promoted to assistant manager of the Hotel Statler in Washington, replacing Peter Zachary, who has left to become manager of a Des Moines country club.

James Rankin, formerly superintendent of service, succeeds Harman as night manager. Albert Harman Faraci is the new superintendent of service. The promotions were announced yesterday by Manager Herbert C. Blunk.

TAX INSTITUTE: For the sixth year the American University will conduct an Institute of Federal Taxes, designed to offer an intensive study of current tax problems for the advanced tax practitioner. The series of eight sessions will start October 12 at Brookings Institute, 722 Jackson place, n.w., Dr. F. K. Mann, of American University faculty is institute director.

SHARP UPTURN: Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported net income of $399,688 for August, a sharp gain of $178,689 over the same 1929 month. For the first eight months, C. & P. net totaled $3,411,178 against $2,314,077 in the like 1929 period. Telephones in service here at the end of August totaled 477,207, a gain of 19,177 for the 12 months.

ORDERS SOAR: Outstanding orders of Washington department stores for new supplies soared 69 percent on August 31 as compared with the same date last year. Although the month's sales spurred 16 percent, stocks of goods on hand at the end of August remained 11 percent higher than last year. A similar trend was shown throughout the Fifth District, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

TV AND MOVIES: The impact that television radio and motion pictures are having on each other is analyzed in a new 28-page illustrated booklet published by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane. Following the over-all analysis, the booklet describes the activities and finances of 26 amusement industry companies. A limited number of copies is available at the Washington branch of the investment house, according to Francis C. Hunter, local manager.

NEW OFFICE: Establishment of a Washington office at 1010 Vermont ave., was announced yesterday by the National Electronic Distributors Corp. Also J. Gerald Mayer, Washington attorney, was appointed general counsel of the Chicago association whose membership comprises nearly all of the parts jobbers in the United States.

EARNINGS: Royal Typewriter Co., Inc. reported net income of $3,909,428 or $3.39 a share for the fiscal year ended July 31, compared with $3,692,650 or $3.19 a share in previous year. Other earnings statements:

REAL PAY AT PEAK

Wages of factory workers rise to highest on record

Factory wages rose to a new peak, according to a report by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, which said that the average weekly wage of factory workers in the Fifth District was $12.15 in September, up from $12.00 in August.

The report said that the increase was due to a combination of factors, including a rise in the cost of living and a general upward movement in the economy.

The report also said that the increase in wages was reflected in the prices of goods, which rose by 1.1 percent in September.

The report said that the increase in wages was a sign of the strength of the economy and the demand for labor.

Broad Upturn

To 19-Year Top

Led by Motors

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Persistent demand for motor shares today sent the stock market off on a general advance that carried it to another new 19-year peak.

A moribund market was brought to life quickly early in the session when Chrysler started a series of gains that took it to a new high for the year at $82.37.

It fell back a little and closed up $3.37 at $82.37.

Others soon joined Chrysler, especially the new $5 par General Motors which added $3.37 and closed at $53.37. It, too, reached a new high on the advance. G. M. stood second on the list of most active issues. Chrysler was tenth.

Steels were hard on the heels of motors, and every one of the leaders in that group attained new highs for the year or equalled the previous peak. U. S. Steel was easily the outstanding performer with a gain of 1/2 at 39 1/2.

It was the sixth most active issue. Rails didn't lose any time, either. Missouri-Kansas-Texas common, up 1/4 at 7 1/4, and the preferred, up 1/4 at 4 1/4, were widely traded. New York Central, up 1/2 at 16 1/2, was fourth most active. Nickel Plate, the wide swinger, added 5/8 at 4 1/2.

Chrysler has been in the buying eye for some days as a result of what is considered its favorable earnings position.

New automobile models are gradually being unveiled privately and publicly, and it begins to look like higher price tags might have to be pinned on them. Wall Street sees high earnings in that.

Steel is somewhat the same position. Capacity is being expanded, and it now looks as though steel prices will be increased.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 90 cents to a new high of $84.50, the best since February 27, 1931. The new mark is 30 cents above the previous 19-year peak set Monday.

Trading expanded markedly to 2,920,000 shares, the biggest day's business since July 20 when the Korean bull market recovery drive was well under way. Yesterday's total was 2,480,000 shares.

Sharp Gain Forecast
In B. & O. Net Income

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—R. B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, estimated today its net income for the first nine months of 1930 would exceed nine million dollars.

Sewage Plant Relocation Plea Rejected

The Fairfax County supervisors yesterday declined to consider a new request for relocation of a proposed sewage disposal plant to be built on the Potomac River near Belle Haven.

On the ground it already has voted formally on the location of the $1,105,000 installation, the board took no action on a resolution from the Federation of Fairfax County Citizens Associations. The civic group asked the board to reconsider its decision of two weeks ago. A half dozen citizens' associations, all members of the federation, previously protested the plant's location without avail.

The federation's resolution suggested that the supervisors consult residents of nearby areas before making a final decision.

The disposal plant is to be the key feature of a $3,000,000 sewage program approved by voters of the country's Sanitary District No. 1 last year. It will occupy a site of from 15 to 18 acres on the river a short distance south of the Belle View Apartment project.

Despite protests of individuals and civic organizations, the site has been deemed by James J. Corbals, county sanitary engineer, as the most suitable and practical for the purpose.

The board also received without action another federation resolution, protesting location of a proposed new Washington airport in any "populous" section of Fairfax County. The resolution contended that an airport close to any of the county's recently developed areas would retard further residential development and would be too close to the existing Washington National Airport.

The resolution was accepted for future reference after county executive secretary R. M. Loughborough expressed belief that the Civil Aeronautics Administration would order a public hearing before a final decision on the airport's location is reached.

Silver Spring Catholic Wins Layman Prize

Edward M. O'Connor of 10707 Amherst ave., Silver Spring, member of the United States Displaced Persons Commission, yesterday received the annual St. Bonaventure Catholic Action Medal as an outstanding Catholic layman.

The award was made by Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, who pontificated at a mass during charter day ceremonies at St. Bonaventure in Olean, N. Y.

Archbishop Cicognani and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey were awarded honorary doctorates of laws at an afternoon convocation.

The Most Rev. Patrick M. McCormick, auxiliary bishop of Washington and rector of Catholic University, received an honorary doctorate of letters.

Others receiving doctorates of letters were the Rev. Isidor O'Brien, OFM, a Philadelphia writer and lecturer, and George E. Sokolsky, columnist and commentator.

Bladensburg Cross-Burning Probe Asked

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been asked by a Republican congressional candidate in Maryland to investigate the burning of a cross in Bladensburg on the eve of the primary elections.

Thomas S. Carr of Annapolis, GOP candidate for the Fifth District seat, said yesterday he wrote to FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover to investigate "this shameful terrorist threat to our American way of life."

He asserted "the local authorities have, for some unknown reason, chosen to close their eyes completely to this incident."

But town police commissioner Leonard Simpson said yesterday an investigation failed to disclose any evidence of "terrorism." He said that in his opinion the whole matter was a "prank."

The cross was burned some time before midnight on September 17 at 47th and Webster sts. in the center of a small community of about 50 Negro homes.

Carr said eyewitnesses told him the cross was burned by a "band of thugs."

Officer Clifton J. Bartley, who responded with fire equipment to an alarm, said he reassured the residents that he would remain on the scene through the night.

Two families did spend the night elsewhere, the officer said, but returned the next morning.

Bartley said his investigation showed the cross was fired by a group of men who left in four large automobiles. He has not been able to identify any of them, he said.

Mrs. Blanch Newman, who lives in the Arid, said she could identify one of the men if she saw him again but said she did not know his name.

Carr opposes Lansdale G. Sasser, the Democratic incumbent in Congress from the Fifth District, in the November 7 elections.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Syracuse is having the worst incidence of polio in its history this year, with a total of 192 cases to date.

Attended Meeting In France

EUGENE MEYER, chairman of the board of The Washington Post Company and former chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has just returned from Europe after attending the fifth annual meeting of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development at Paris. He said recovery had made real progress in England and France "with the help of the Marshall Plan"

Even Death Now Inflated

The Fairfax County supervisors, at the request of a group of county funeral directors, yesterday agreed to raise the welfare department's allocation for the burial in indigent persons from $50 to $100 per burial.

An additional expenditure not to exceed $25 for grave-digging expenses also was approved.

The funeral directors, headed by Howard King of Herndon, contended that the existing allocation was insufficient.

Grand Jury Sworn In for 2-Month Term

A new grand jury was sworn in yesterday at District Court, bringing to four the number of panels immediately available for use.

Chosen foreman of the new jury by Judge Edward A. Tamm was Lloyd B. Wilson, Jr., 41, of 4451 Volta pl. nw. He is manager of the H. L. Rust Co. real estate dealers here.

Deputy foreman is Thomas J. Brown, 44, of 1921 Kalamazoo rd. nw., a self-employed salesman.

The new grand jury will sit for a two-month term, alternating in sessions during the day with another panel. Two other grand juries are subject to immediate call.

The other members of the new panel are:

Mrs. Marie A. Ashford, 230 Rhode Island ave. nw.; Mrs. Laura Mitchell Boyd, 1936 Savannah pl. se.; Mrs. Inez Bryant, 1810 California st. nw.; Robert G. Dorrity, 2804 McKinley st. nw.; Mrs. Doris H. Ellason, 5507 st. nw.; and William H. Floyd, 39 P st. sw.

Plumbers Sent Bid to Settle Wage Dispute

The Washington Plumbing Contractors Association yesterday offered to arbitrate its wage dispute with the AFL plumbers, who walked out Monday in a demand for 25 cents an hour increase in pay.

The plumbers have turned down the contractors' offer of a two-year contract, with 15 cents an hour increase in pay the first year and an equal boost the second year.

Frank Haines, president of Standard Engineering Co. and chairman of the employers' negotiating committee, wired Bernard Downey, business agent for the plumbers' local, proposing arbitration through the facilities of the joint board set up early this year by the AFL International Plumbers Union and the National Association of Heating and Piping Contractors.

The union has taken the proposal under consideration.

Stolen Safe Found; $600 In Cash Gone

Police recovered a missing safe at 11 a. m. yesterday but it was battered and minus the $600 it had contained a few hours earlier.

The safe, weighing several hundred pounds, was carted from the rear of the B & S Market, 2007 14th st. nw., sometime between 8 p. m. Tuesday and 1 a. m. yesterday.

At 1 a. m., police cruising in an alley behind the store noticed that the rear door was open. An investigation disclosed marks from the safe's rollers on the ground, showing that it had been dragged to a waiting car or truck.

The safe was recovered near the District line, in a field at 61st and Dix sts. ne. Its door had been pried open.

Murphy Asks Right to Argue On Hiss Appeal

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Thomas F. Murphy, successful prosecutor of the second Alger Hiss perjury trial, formally asked today that he be allowed to argue the Government's case as a "friend of the court" when the Hiss appeal comes up next week.

Murphy, whose recent appointment as New York police commissioner barred him from serving as Government counsel, said he filed the request because of his "complete and thorough knowledge of the case acquired over a period of more than two years."

The request was contained in a joint motion filed by Murphy and special assistant United States Attorney Clarke S. Ryan with the clerk of the United States Court of Appeals.

The Hiss appeal is scheduled for October 13. Ryan, who had worked on the Hiss investigation and assisted Murphy in both Hiss trials, had been expected to substitute for him should he be unable to appear.

Officials Won't Admit Error, So He's in Jail, Lifer Asserts

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 4 (U.P.)—A 55-year-old life termer told the Court of Appeals today he is behind bars only because parole officials refuse to admit they made a mistake.

Lawyers for James T. Murray asked the court to release him from Maryland penitentiary.

He was imprisoned first in 1923 for slaying a Salvation Army Home watchman in Baltimore.

He would be free now, his sentence commuted, but for a "trumped up story invented by his sister," Murray's attorneys charged.

Former Governor Herbert R. O'Connor revoked the commutation seven months after it was granted in 1941. A "cruel and arbitrary act," the Maryland Civil Liberties Committee said. The committee intervened for Murray as a friend of the court.

Murray's own counsel, Edgar Paul Boyko, insisted the State Department of Parole and Probation no longer believe a report by Murray's sister that he "engaged in some criminal misconduct" with her 2-year-old daughter.

He blamed Murray's reimprisonment on parole board "preoccupation" with wartime problems. He said Murray is still locked up "perhaps because of the well-known administrative reluctance to admit gross errors of judgment." Assistant Attorney General Kenneth C. Proctor replied that O'Connor acted under broad powers of a Governor.

A prisoner freed on conditional commutation "must be, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion," Proctor said. He mentioned a medical report which had caused Baltimore Judge Herman M. Moser to label Murray unsafe for parole.

Murray's sister, Mrs. Leland Matz, sponsored his commutation. They soon bickered. He accused her of forging his name to cash his share of their mother's insurance. In June he moved to another house.

In Series Opener

Against the Wall

Associated Press Wirephoto

MORE THAN one player had his back to the wall in yesterday's opening game of the World Series, won by the Yankees over the Phils, 1-0. In the top picture of the three below, Hank Bauer, Yankee's right fielder, stretches against the wall in the seventh for a drive by Granny Hamner, Phils shortstop. In the middle picture, Gene Woodling, Yanks left fielder, crashes into wall chasing a foul fly off the bat of Phils' Eddie Waitkus in first inning. At the bottom, Del Ennis, Phil's right fielder, hits padded wall in vain effort to grab foul fly by Yankees Johnny Mize. Ball drops to ground.

HEADS UP OR DOWN—These pictures graphically show how the Yankees and Phils felt yesterday after New York's 1-0 victory in the World Series opener.

Rizzuto. Right, the Phils are a dejected lot, with hanging heads. In front, hand to cap, is Manager Eddie Sawyer

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—If at this point the Phillies do not have a better understanding of how tough it is to beat the Yankees, they have no memory of what happened in the World Series opener.

Today, the Phillies, got a tremendous pitching job from Jim Konstanty, and the Yankees were held to five hits and one mere run. Yogi Berra, Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Mize didn't get a hit all day. Yet the Phillies didn't win. On a day when the Yanks needed a shut-out pitcher, they came up with one in Vic Raschi, who got 'em home.

The Yankees defy cataloging as a ball team. They beat you, 1 to 0, or 12 to 11, as the need arises. When their Murderers Row lets them down, their pitching picks them up. If it doesn't look good for the Phillies in this World Series, all American Leaguers are unsurprised.

The Phils today were looking like the team that was floundering in the last two weeks of the pennant race when they lost 13 of 16 games for lack of hitting. The batting fizz has gone out of the Whiz Kids.

MANAGER EDDIE SAWYER couldn't think any runs across the plate for the Phils, with Vic Raschi out there pounding his fastball past the Whiz Kids. But otherwise, Professor Sawyer distinguished himself today. He braved criticism by starting Right Pitcher Jim Konstanty for the first time this season, then saw Konstanty lose a 1-0 game.

He put himself squarely on the spot again in the Yankees' third inning when with two out and runners on second and third, he brazenly ordered Joe DiMaggio to pass to fill the bases despite the near-presence of Left-handed Hitter Johnny Mize, whom American League pitchers all season have been rating a more dangerous clutch man than DiMag.

That worked, too, when Mize popped up weakly for the third out. In the brains department, Sawyer batted 1.000 for the day. But he learned what American League managers have known all along, when the Yankees got a run out of Konstanty in the fourth. You can't get away with it all day against the Yankees.

THERE ARE misgivings now, among National Leaguers, that the Yankees might mop up the Phils in four straight. However, Mr. Garry Schumacher, of the New York Giants, whose club recently swept two double-headers from the Phils, was defying the Yankees to match that feat. "They can't beat the Phils four straight in two days, like we did," he said.

The Phils' position isn't good, with Sawyer's kids in their batting slump, but the paradox is that their pitching may now be better squared away than before they went into the series. A few days ago, young Robin Roberts, who will work tomorrow, looked like their lone solid bet against the Yankees, but Konstanty's smart job of it today makes the picture better.

Sawyer's maneuver in giving Roberts an extra day's rest after his pennant-clincher in Brooklyn could pan out happily tomorrow, and now he has established the fact that Konstanty is a rough guy for the Yanks to deal with. In a crisis, he could re-start Konstanty in the fourth game of the series.

THERE WASN'T any trace of jitters among the Phils, except for one excusable low throw by Third Baseman Puddin'head Jones. They were simply being overpowered by the pitching of a man who had won 21 games for the Yankees. But by this time, his kids' failure to hit ought to be haunting Sawyer who saw them nearly waste a 7½-game lead in the last 10 days of the season for failure to hit.

Yet if the Phils couldn't beat the Yankees on a day when Berra, DiMag and Mize weren't hitting, the future has no particularly rosy aspects for them. It is too much to expect that the Phils can contain the bats of that trio every day in the series. Roberts, despite his talents, could be their victim tomorrow.

Manager Casey Stengel was playing it down to the last percentage today when he moved his defense units, Bill Johnson and Johnny Hopp, into action as eighth-inning replacements for Bobby Brown and Johnny Mize. He was rewarded in the ninth when Hopp made a fancy play on Ashburn's fiery smash, a ball Mize might not have come up with. The change at first base was timely for the Yanks. Either Stengel is very smart, or his ouija board didn't fail him.

the Yankees' worries. He allowed only one walk, to Eddie Waitkus, in the sixth.

His catcher, Yogi Berra, had to shake Raschi up a bit in the ninth, though, when the top of the Phils' batting order moved in to threaten his skimpy 1-0 lead. When his first two pitches to Waitkus were high and wide, Berra threw the ball back at Raschi as if to tear his head off and warn him to keep bearing down.

Raschi reacted by getting two quick strikes over on Waitkus and then disposing of him on a ground ball to Rizzuto for the first out of the ninth. He got rid of Richie Ashburn with the help of a nice pickup by First Baseman Johnny Hopp.

Mighty Slicer Strikes Out
But the presence of Dick Sisler, their home-run hero in the pennant clincher against Brooklyn, kept the 30,746 glued to their seats after two were out in the ninth.

Then it was that Raschi sealed his victory with a flourish. On four pitches he struck out Sisler and then called for the ball from Berra to add it to his series souvenirs.

The Whiz Kids didn't get any kind of a hit until the fifth inning, when they got their only two—a single over second base by Puddin'head Jones with one out, and a single to left by Andy Seminick with two out. In that crisis, Raschi merely went to work and struck out Mike Goliat.

Yet until the Yankees wrenched the winning run out of him in the fourth, it was Konstanty, not Raschi, who was the day's pitching hero. He was pitching himself smartly out of trouble against the big guns of the Yankee batting order to keep it a scoreless duel.

It appeared as if Konstanty, their relief ace, would need relief himself in short order when the first two Yankees reached base in the first inning—Woodling on a walk and Rizzuto with a single to left. Now he had to face the meaty sector of the Yankees batting crew—Berra, DiMaggio and Mize.

He Gets the Big Boys
Berra whacked a fly ball to Ennis in right field and Woodling

romped to third after the catch. But Konstanty was completely unshaken. He fed Joe DiMaggio a slow pitch and was rewarded with a foul pop to Waitkus. He gave Mize some more of the slow stuff and watched him fly out harmlessly to Ennis.

They were back at him in the third inning when Raschi himself made trouble for Konstanty by hanging a single to center at the outset. His troubles multiplied when Woodling drew a walk, and Phil Rizzuto sacrificed the runners to third and second, again with one out.

Here it was—Berra, DiMaggio and Mize again for Konstanty to deal with, and he was ice water. He held Berra to a glorified pop-up to Sisler in short left and Raschi was compelled to hold third after the catch.

Manager Eddie Sawyer walked out to the mound and ordered DiMaggio purposely passed to fill the bases, thereby putting himself squarely on the spot with left-handed hitter Mize the next batter.

No strategy ever worked more perfectly, big Mize was discomfited by a Konstanty curve ball, and raised a soft pop fly to Third Baseman Jones for the big third out.

But after the Yanks caught up with Konstanty in the fourth for the day's only run, it began to bulk dimly against the Phils and their fans. They were scarcely connecting for a loud foul off Raschi in the first four innings, and the portent of it all was unhappy.

The husky Yankee righthander got out all of the first 13 men he faced. And going into the fifth, only two of his pitches had been hit out of the infield by the Whiz Kids.

They got a man on base for the last time when Waitkus walked with one out in the sixth. But Ashburn and Sisler were no help. Ashburn flied to DiMaggio, and Pennant Hero Sisler raised a mid-pop to Johnny Mize.

Bad Day for Sisler
It was a sad afternoon for slugger Sisler, anyway. In four times at bat he consecutively grounded out to Raschi, struck out, popped to Mize and struck out.

There was a momentary thrill for the Whiz Kids' fans in the seventh when with two out Gran Hamner walloped a drive toward right field that appeared tabbed for extra bases. But Raschi got a lift from Hank Bauer on that blow. Bauer careened against the wall, made a leaping catch and held the ball despite the collision.

Raschi gave Bauer a fond wave of acknowledgement from the pitcher's mound, went back to work, and got the last six Phils out in order.

Odds Now 4-1 Champs Will Take Series From Phils

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4 (AP).—Righthander Allie Reynolds (16-12) was Manager Casey Stengel's choice to try for the Yanks' second straight win here tomorrow. Righthander Robin Roberts (20-11), hero of Sunday's pennant-clincher, will work for the Phils.

After tomorrow's game the scene shifts to Yankee Stadium in New York for the third and fourth games and a fifth, if necessary.

Today's victory made the Yankees 4 to 1 favorites to win the series, odds-makers reported. The Yanks had been 3 to 1 before today. On the second game only, the Yankees are favored at 7 to 3.

"The best game I ever pitched," That's the way Raschi described the mound masterpiece that gave the Yankees a 1-0 victory in today's World Series opener.

"It had to be my best," the big pitcher said with a grin in the Yankee dressing room. "Nothing" else would have beaten Jim Konstanty.

Raschi's 1-0 shutout today was his third this year. He blanked Cleveland and St. Louis, 1-0.

Raschi said the knee felt better after the game. He was sure it will not keep him from pitching again in the series.

History repeated itself for young Gerry Coleman whose outfield fly in the fourth inning drove in the lone run. It was the third time in the last two years Coleman had a hand in a Yankee series victory.

Brown, whose double led to the only run of the game, hit only four two-baggers all season. Brown apparently rises to heights in World Series play. He set a record by getting three straight pinch hits in the 1947 classic and batted .500 to take hitting honors last year.

The Whiz Kids took their heart-breaking 1 to 0 defeat like adults. Konstanty said he is ready to pitch in relief again tomorrow if Skipper Sawyer needs him. "No, I'm not the least bit tired. Twenty warmup pitches tomorrow and I'll be ready to go in there."

Says Lavelle Giants' Win Over Browns No Accident

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THAT STUNNING 6-0 victory the New York Giants scored over the supposedly invincible Cleveland Browns was no accident.

"It was planned that way," smiled Mr. Jack Lavelle, Rotund Mr. Lavelle is chief scout for Coach Steve Owen's Polo Grounders and often doubles as their publicity man. He's visiting Washington in the latter capacity, trying to drum up a little interest in Sunday's clash between his beloved Giants and the bedraggled Redskins.

Mr. Lavelle put his two good eyes on the Browns five times. He followed them from Akron, Ohio, to Baltimore and filled six notebooks with bits of intelligence gleaned on his travels.

TWO THINGS stood out in his mind about the Browns, Lavelle declared yesterday.

1. Any team that hoped to check the two great Cleveland ends, Mac Speedie and Dante Lavelli, at the line of scrimmage was nuts. "They just aren't going to be held up unless you tie them down and that's still illegal," Lavelle said.

2. Otto Graham, the Browns' sensational passer, can't throw worth a hoot when rushed.

"If we can break through their line and rush Graham off his feet, we can beat them," Lavelle told Owen.

AND THAT'S exactly what the Giants did. Graham was rushed so strongly that he was penalized twice for grounding passes illegally and on two other occasions he had to lateral to halfbacks who weren't expecting the ball.

"We smothered him, and how," Lavelle grinned. "With Graham pinned down, we didn't have to worry about Lavelli and Speedie because there was no body to throw a pass to them."

Mr. Lavelle admitted that this strategy sounded simple, but he insists it's exactly what happened.

"We've been trying to play that type of football for years and haven't been able to. This year we can because we've got the players who can do what we ask them to do."

"All of the Giants except Center John Rapa, of Oklahoma University, enjoyed thrashing the Browns," Lavelle continued.

"RAPAZZ received a slight concussion late in the game and didn't remember a thing for two days," Lavelle said. "It was too bad, too. He played with the Chicago Hornets for two years and saw Cleveland whack the Hornets four times in that span."

"Now, at last, he's on a team that beats the Browns and Rapa didn't remember a thing."

"Lavelle has seen all 13 teams in the expanded National Football League and says 'on any given day, any of these teams can beat the other one.'"

"That goes for the Baltimore Colts, too," he added as an afterthought.

Hoyas' Charney Recovers, Faces Tulsa Saturday

Right Halfback Ralph Charney, stricken with appendicitis a month ago, will be ready for fulltime service with Georgetown when the Hoyas tackle Tulsa Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

Charney, one of Coach Bob Margat's most promising sophomore runners, got in for a couple of plays against Penn State. But after yesterday's Hoya scrimmage, he appeared ready to go full steam.

However Jack Dunn, a reserve sophomore tackle, bruised his knee, and Trainer Joe Kuzco pronounced him unfit for play. Tulsa is a six-point favorite, having beaten McMurtry, 20-13, and lost to St. Francis, 23-14, in its two starts. The Hoyas lost their only game, 34-14, to Penn State.

Maryland Park, Mount Rainier Tied for Lead

Maryland Park and Mount Rainier are tied for first place in the Prince Georges County High School Football League after winning their openers Saturday.

Maryland Park defeated Hyattsville, 12-6, and Mount Rainier downed Laurel, 19-0. Greenbelt and Bladensburg have not started their league seasons yet.

Strongest team in the six-team league appears to be Bladensburg, last year's champion. The Blades tied Bethesda, 6-6, last week in a non-league contest.

Post's Coach of the Week Tatum Guessed Right On Navy Strategy

THE WASHINGTON POST salutes Maryland's Jim Tatum as its coach of the week.

Seldom has the big guy from South Carolina done a better job of preparing a team for a football game than he did last Saturday for the Navy game.

There are few coaches in the business who can devise defenses after studying scouting reports of the opposition better than Tatum. In this instance, Tatum did not have the benefit of a scouting report on Navy since it was the opener for the Middles.

So he embarked on a logical course. He guessed the Middles would utilize some of the offensive stuff the San Francisco 49ers employed inasmuch as Eddie Erdelatz, the new Middles coach, coached the 49er line for two seasons.

The next step was to study pictures of the 1949 Forty-Niner games. Next came a visit to Baltimore to watch the 49ers play the Colts in an exhibition game.

He was taking a long gamble that Navy would stick pretty much to the Forty-Niner pattern. The Middles did.

It was a big victory for Tatum's Terps. His ability to bring a team back after a crushing defeat, such as Georgia administered to Maryland two weeks ago, was questionable until Saturday. Against Navy he proved that he and his players can rebound.

When the 35-21 Navy game was over, the happy Terrapin carried their big coach off the field on their shoulders. They appreciated his job.

Guepe Picks Hoyas to Lose

Coach Art Guepe, of Virginia, loser to Penn, 21-7, last Saturday, takes a stab at this week's Washington Post Pick the Winner Contest, hoping to get back on the winning trail.

Last week, Georgetown's Bob Margat picked 13 out of 19, and a 1 d Notre Dame would beat.

Art Guepe North Carolina, 28-21. He had the right margin, the Irish having won, 14-7.

Here's a rundown on the teams which Guepe picks.

TULSA (Georgetown is still building); ARMY (too many good backs); NORTHWESTERN (Navy is inexperienced); COLUMBIA (ran up a big score last week); YALE (Herman Hickman has Ellis on winning trail); CALIFORNIA (long trip will hurt Penn); OHIO STATE (showed big scoring punch against S. M. U.); MICHIGAN STATE (too much all around power for Maryland); GEORGIA (Notre Dame took too much out of North Carolina); WAKE FOREST (Rube McCray has too many injuries at William and Mary); ALABAMA (supposed to be best in Southeast); RICE (really has it this season); IOWA (another win for new coach, Ken Ralfeberger).

MINNESOTA (too much experience); NOTRE DAME (have to string along with the No. 1 team); KANSAS (On the upgrade); OKLAHOMA (have to stick with No. 2 team); TEXAS CHRISTIAN AND ARKANSAS even (both lost to Oklahoma Aggies, 13-7); WASHINGTON look what it did to Minnesota; WASHINGTON STATE and SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, even.

The score of the Duke-Tennessee game — Duke, 20; Tennessee, 13. (Sticking my neck out).

Lord Carlton Wins

Lord Carlton defeated Roland Meeker with a body press in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

Cards to Drop Dyer-Report

Philadelphia, Oct. 4 (AP)—Eddie Dyer will be replaced as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, the Associated Press learned today.

Dyer's successor will not be chosen from among the present members of the Cardinals. But it definitely will be a man in the Cardinal organization, a reliable source revealed.

Speculation as to Dyer's dismissal has been going on for several months, ever since the sale of Pitcher Jim Hearn to the New York Giants. Rumors had either Card Coach Terry Moore or Shortstop Marty Marion replacing the genial oil man from Texas.

"It will be neither," the source said. "Fred Salgh, the St. Louis owner, wants a man with managerial experience. You won't be wrong if you said the current choice lies between Managers Johnny Keane of Rochester and Rollie Hemslay of Columbus."

Meanwhile, in Houston Dyer said "nothing has been settled" about his future with the St. Louis Cardinals. He said he and Salgh have "talked over next year but the whole thing still is up in the air."

State Open Champ Tops Field of 62

Charlie Bassler of Rolling Road Country Club, Catonsville, Md., shot a two-under par 69 at Congressional Country Club yesterday to win the pro-member tournament.

Bassler, Maryland open champion, defeated a field of 62 pros, which included National PGA Champion Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., and George Fazio of Washington's Woodmont Country Club. Fazio finished in a triple tie for the National Open championship last summer.

Bassler, who tied for second in the District Open Tuesday at Indian Spring, won $250 for the best score over the long, wet Congressional course.

Andy Gibson of the Country Club of Maryland in Baltimore was second with a 70 and won $150. Par 71s by Harper and Buck Worsham, assistant pro at Congressional, were worth $110 each.

The best ball play ended in a tie between Worsham and his partner, Maury Fitzgerald, a guest from Kenwood, and Gibson and J. D. Kendall, jr. of the host club. They had handicapped best ball scores of 66.

Bassler's first birdie was on the eighth hole, toughest on the golf course. He went over par on the eleventh but birdied 13 and 14 in a row and parred all the rest.

PRO SWEEPSTAKES

Charley Bassler (Rolling Road), 38-34-69.

Andy Gibson (Country Club of Maryland), 33-35-70.

Buck Worsham (Congressional), 34-37-71.

Max Edlin (Baltimore), Tree-R. E. Anderson, Patis-Pittman, Musser-Bomar, Bassler-Salgh, Samuels-Kelly, Ray-Moore, Widner-J. F. Radice tied for third with 67.

Earley, of Terps, Believed Out of Mich. State Tilt

Defensive Halfback Buck Earley hurt his knee yesterday as Maryland went through a rough workout and probably will be sidelined during Saturday's game at Michigan State, Coach Jim Tatum reported.

It was the last contract session before the game. The Terps will taper off with a light workout today and leave by plane for Lansing, Mich., Friday morning.

Meanwhile, in Lansing, Michigan State wound up its heavy practice today. Coach Biggie Munn said "Maryland is a tough outfit. I hope we can go out there and do another fine job."

Picks 18 Out of 20 Commerce Dept. Scientist Wins Post's Football Contest

Bottom's Up—that's the story of last week's Washington Post Pick the Winner Football contest.

John L. Bottom of 2009 F st. n.w. won the contest.

Like four others, Bottom correctly selected the correct winners of 18 games on The Post's 20-game contest list. To clinch two tickets and traveling expenses to Saturday's Duke-Tennessee game, he predicted Notre Dame would beat North Carolina, 27-7. The score was, 14-7. His score was closest to the result.

A scientist at the Department of Commerce's Coast and Geodetic Survey, Bottom's work deals with charting the American coast line and analyzing the changes in the magnetic field.

"I read everything that's printed about college football in newspapers and magazines," the 24-year-old Bottom said.

"I'm tickled pink to win the trip. It looks like I moved here just in time. I grew up in Marquette, Mich., and came here less than a month ago."

"I played a little football in my high school days. I was a center. When I went to Northern Michigan College of Education, I quit playing. I graduated in February, 1948," said Bottom.

Bottom's only two mistakes on the contest list were near misses. He picked Indiana over Nebraska—that was a 20-20 tie. And he predicted Texas Christian would beat Oklahoma A. & M.—the Aggies won, 13-7.

The others who came close are: Glenn E. Padgett, 1916 N st. n.w.; M. B. Oliver, 6511 Flanders dr., Hyattsville; H. Kipper, 800 South Arlington Mill dr., Arlington, and Emil W. Sell, 6906 23d ave., Hyattsville.

Plays GW Here Friday Night West Virginia Is Rebuilding In Football Under Art Lewis

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

It's not one of West Virginia's better teams that Coach Art Lewis is bringing in for Friday night's George Washington game at Griffith Stadium.

This is Lewis' first year at the head of the Mountaineers, and he's building mostly with the leftovers of Bud DeGroot's team which won only 4 out of 11 last season.

So far, Lewis' boys have beaten Western Reserve, 38-13, and lost to Washington and Lee for the first time in their long series, 26-7.

That W&L loss was especially disappointing to Lewis because the players who licked him, Gil Bocetti, Ray Leister and Dave Hedge, are players he brought to the Lexington, Va., school during his coaching tenure there.

Lewis' 1950 Mountaineers will outweigh G. W. nearly 10 points to the man in the line, but rates only an even chance to beat the Colonials. G. W. lost to Virginia, 19-0, and upset V. M. I., 15-12.

Two of West Virginia's backfield regulars, Halfback Walter Glenn and Fullback Johnny Murphy, will see only limited action because of leg injuries suffered against K&L.

The two lads whom the Colonials will have to watch closest are Quarterback Billy Allen and End Ross Herron.

Allen runs the Mountaineers T formation and throws a good long pass. Herron, 213-pound junior, is his favorite receiver.

Herron has already caught 12 passes for 160 yards and a touchdown this season. Allen, 5 feet 9 inches tall and 170 pounds, gained 140 yards through the air against Western Reserve, but six of his tosses were intercepted in the W&L contest.

As an added attraction, West Virginia has one of the few remaining college dropkickers in 147 pound senior, Gene Simmons.

Clayton, Kelsey To Fight Here

Sam Kelsey and Marshall Clayton, local lightweights, were signed last night for an eight-round battle on the weekly boxing show at Turner's Arena Monday night.

Another eight-round match has been lined up between Coley Wallace, New York heavyweight sensation, and big Joe Green, local belter.

THE WASHINGTON POST
Thursday, October 5, 1950 19

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS: AT BOWIE Bucking the World Series and big football games finds Bowie business considerably off expectations. Horsemen and management can be expected to get together soon—subject: Reduction of purses. Justin Funkhouser's Noble Impulse probably has run his last race. Trainer Frank Gall, says the colt will not stand training and he will not stand next spring. The badges for this meeting are also good for the second session which closes the Maryland season. With agent Larry Lall, who helped develop Jockey Frank Bone, on a vacation, former jockey Guy Mangum will make the riding engagements for the youngster. T. H. Yorke's Saucy Boy was destroyed Tuesday. He injured himself in Canada and failed to respond to treatment. See you at the rail.

Winner Survives Rough Race, Pays $16.20; My Sonny Boy 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Oct. 4.—A good time was had by all, in a crowd of 6278—all, that is, who bet on the Cedar Farm's Sonofun in the Blenheim Purse, featuring the mid-week program. The aptly named son of Grand Time and Trace O'Fun forged into the finish line a length in front of the closest opposition in a field of six.

There was no joy, however, for those who wagered and then watched the favorite, E. A. Nicodemus' Laran end up in second position. Many of his backers believed the choice was the victim of football tactics on the part of the winner, Jockey Bobby Martin, who rode Laran failed to claim a foul.

Daniel Sutherland Jr.'s My Sonny Boy was third in the sprint test and there was nothing phony about this.

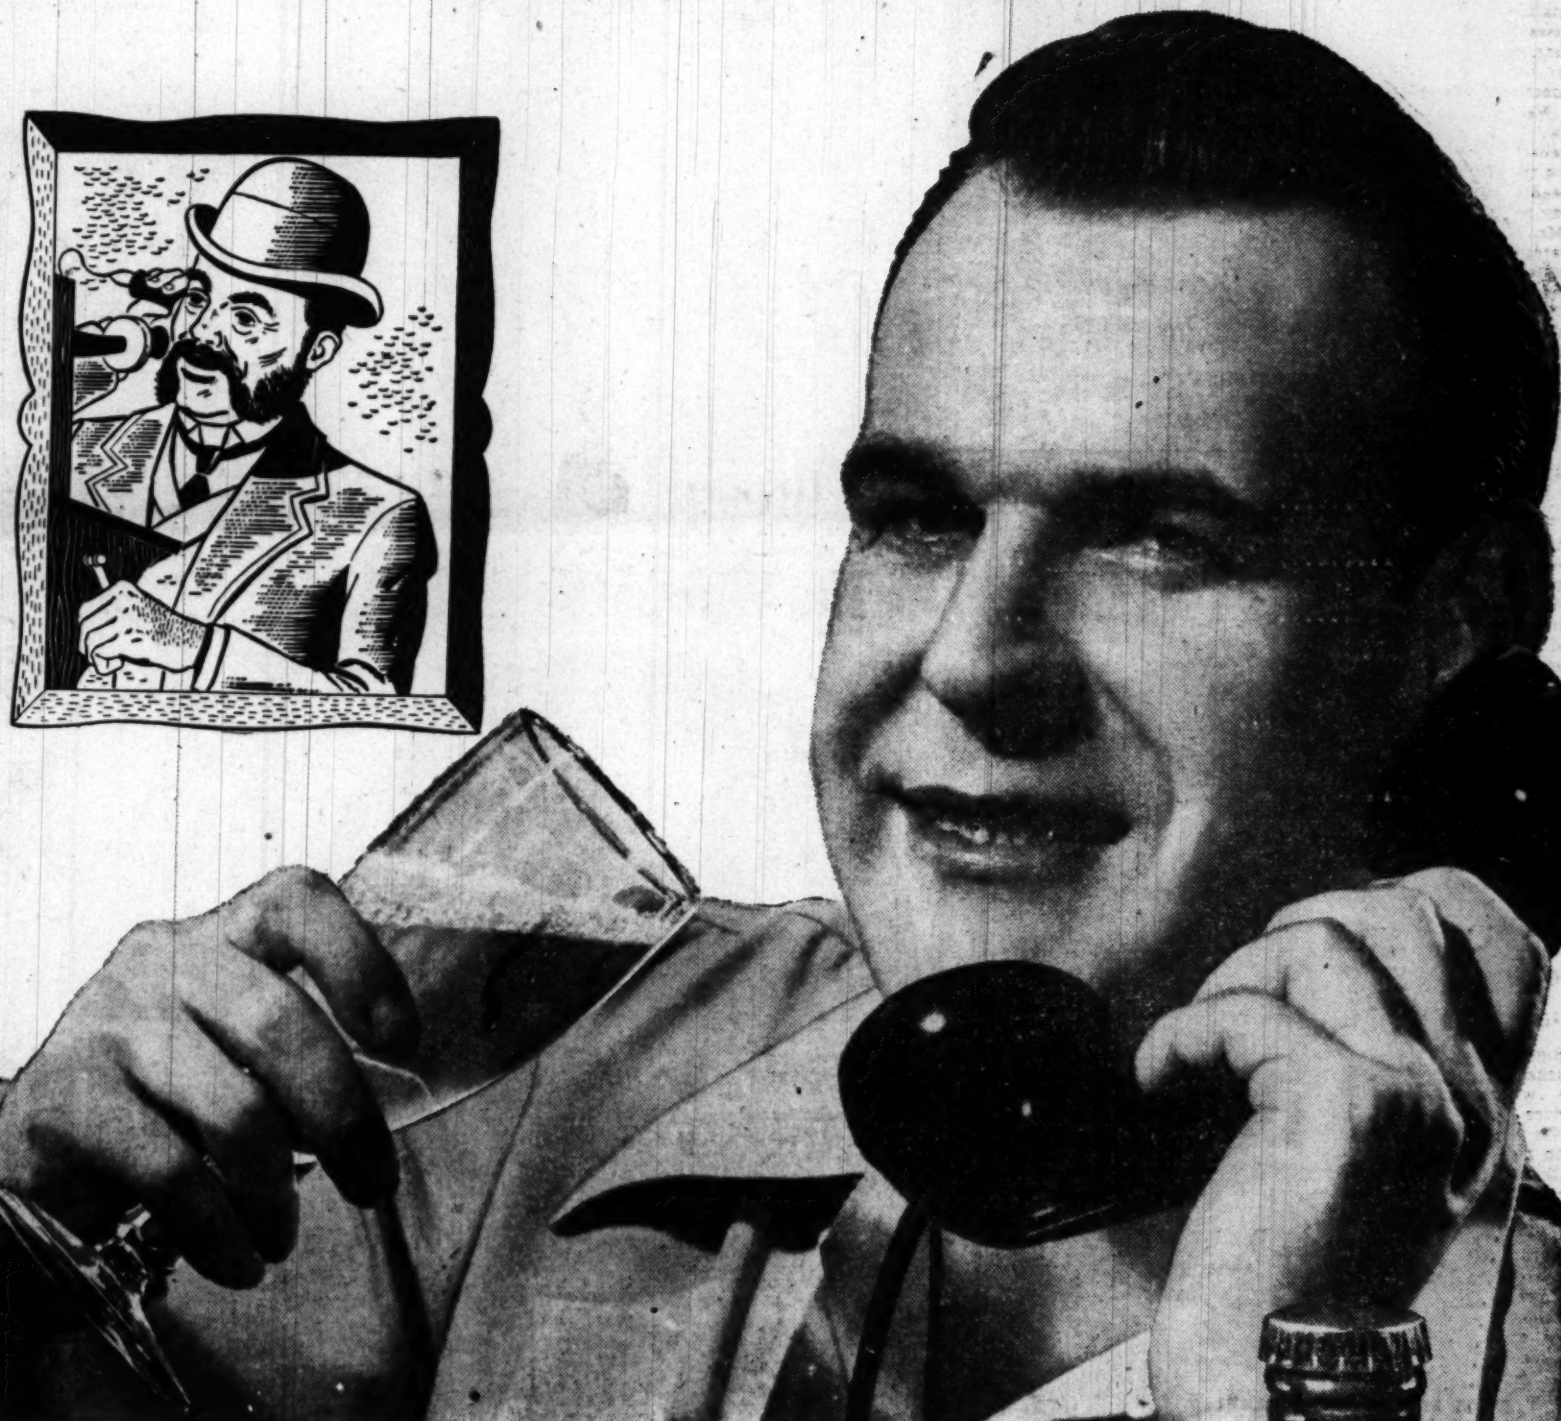

Laran Bumped at Start

Sonofun better collected a juicy $16.20 win mutual, which was enough to add to the disgust of Laran's supporters. The winner's time was 1:13 for the six furlongs over a drying out track,

DON'T USE GREASY & CO.

IF YOU WANT A CLEAN SCALP—HANDSOME-LOOKING HAIR!

Remember, water is no hair tonic. But, on the other hand, don't plaster your hair down with greasy, sticky products which cover hair and scalp with a dirt-catching scum. Healthy-looking hair must have a cleaner scalp. So use Kreml! It's never been duplicated to keep hair perfectly in place—it makes hair look naturally well-groomed. It never looks or feels greasy.

And you'll like the invigorating "wake-up" tingle Kreml gives your scalp. It always keeps hair and scalp feeling so clean. Also excellent to lubricate a dry scalp and remove dandruff flakes.

SAVE MONEY: Buy the new full-size Kreml—it saves you nearly 90%.

Ancient Age...

5 year old straight Kentucky bourbon!

Straight Bourbon Whiskey, 66 Proof, Ancient Age Distilling Co., Frankfort, Ky

4 WAYS BETTER!

EXTRA-PALE! Hold Valley Forge to the light... compare it! Your own eyes will tell you it's far more clear than ordinary beer... extra-pale and perfect!

EXTRA-LIGHT! So mild, so s-m-o-o-t-h, so light in body! You can taste the difference!

EXTRA-AGED! Aged longer to please your particular taste... to make it mellower, smoother and more enjoyable!

EXTRA-PURE! Brewed in one of America's newest most modern breweries... with its own sparkling artesian well water!

ASK FOR THE HANDY NEW NO DEPOSIT GLASS BOTTLE

What a convenience! No deposit required, no return to make. Best of all, the glass protects Valley Forge's famous flavor. Ask for this better bottle next time you order Valley Forge Beer.

Listen to Eddie Gallagher's Valley Forge Monocle over WTOP every night from 11:30 PM to 12:30 AM.

Hear and see Bryson Rask with the Valley Forge Telenews Daily on Channel 7 at 7 PM, Monday thru Friday.

Hear Bob Wolf with his Sports Show for Valley Forge Beer over WWDG every evening at 6 PM.

Center Holdash, Of North Carolina, Lineman of Week

CHAPL HILL, N. C., Oct. 4 (P)—Irv Holdash, North Carolina's line-backing center, was selected lineman of the week for his fine play against Notre Dame.

Others mentioned for linemen of the week included tackle Bob Coleman of Michigan State for his part in Michigan State's upset of Michigan. End Bob Hoff of Iowa was praised for his play against Southern California. Still other linemen praised were End Blaine Eason of Duke and Center Larry Smith of South Carolina.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their teeth dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTERTH the alkaline (non-scent) powder on your plates. Hold false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour, checks "denture breath". Checks FASTERTH at any drug store.

Hafner Sent To Seattle

BOSTON, Oct. 4 (P)—The assignment of Mickey Hafner, veteran southpaw pitcher, to the Seattle Coast League club was announced by the Boston Braves.

Roller Derby Jets Open Home Stand

Ladies' Night will be featured tonight when Coach Silver Rich's all-new Washington Jets inaugurate their National Roller Derby League series with the New York Chiefs at Uline Arena, 8:30 o'clock. This rivalry extends through Monday. Then, the local skaters will entertain Coach Russ Masro's Chicago Westerners from October 10-18.

The popular Chiefs, champions of 1948-49 and semifinalist in the "World Series" at Madison Square Garden last June, will be making their debut at Uline's.

School Bond Petition to Go Before Court In Arlington

Judge Is Obligated To Set Referendum On $7,450,000 For Improvements

Arlington's School Board yesterday accepted a petition of 5287 county voters who want a referendum November 7 to decide whether $7,450,000 in bonds will be issued to improve schools.

The board unanimously voted to forward petitions to Arlington Circuit Court today. Once this step is taken, the court must order the special election.

Signatures were collected by 450 county P-TA workers, Ivan I. Booker, County P-TA Council president, told the board as he presented the petitions.

This is what the new bond issue would add to the Arlington school system.

Classroom space for 4400 more pupils in six new schools (one a combined junior-senior high) and in six additions; sites for future schools the board thinks will be needed by 1960, and remodeling of 12 present schools.

Meet 2 Years' Need
These new facilities will meet school needs for the next two years, the board feels—three years, if Federal school aid becomes available.

School Superintendent William A. Early said he hopes all six additions and three elementary schools "will be ready by the fall of 1951."

Thus far, there has been no open, organized Arlington opposition to the board's school bond bid.

On the other hand, these Arlington groups have endorsed the $7,450,000 bond issue: Chamber of Commerce, Civic Federation, League of Women Voters, Citizens Committee for School Improvement, Organized Women Voters, Federation of Women Clubs, Arlington Education Association, Council of Negro Organizations, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Detailed Plans
Here is a detailed breakdown of what the $7,450,000 is expected to buy:

1. A new combined junior-senior high school, probably located in the Barcroft area near Four Mile Run playground. It would cost $3,500,000 and hold 2000 pupils.

2. Three new elementary schools for 1050 pupils costing $1,330,000—the Claremont School at Chestnut and S. Buchanan st.; Nottingham School at Little Falls rd. and N. Nottingham st.; and the Fillmore School near the present Henry Clay School at 3011 N. 7th st.

3. Additions costing a total of $950,000 and accommodating 750 more pupils, at these schools: Barcroft, Jackson, Kemper, Langston, Stewart and Woodlawn.

4. Replacement of the old Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Nelson Page Elementary schools with new buildings on larger sites. They will cost $640,000, the board estimates, and hold 300 more pupils than the old buildings.

Other Projects

5. Additional space for 20 to 300 more elementary pupils probably at the Jackson, McKinley and Walter Reed Elementary schools. Estimated cost: $300,000.

6. Purchase of sites for schools the board thinks will be needed by 1960 at an estimated $430,000. Early said purchase of land now is necessary "before sites become built up."

7. Remodeling of 12 schools at a cost of $300,000. The schools: Lee, Madison, Marshall, Woodmont, Monroe, Henry, Fairlington, Custis, Cherrystone, and Minton Junior High. Early said the board can thus "utilize a lot of waste space" in present school buildings for such things as multi-purpose rooms, libraries, clinics, lunch rooms, teachers rooms, offices and storage rooms.

Arlington School Board Gets Bond Petition

5287 SIGNATURES—The Arlington County School Board yesterday received a petition requesting a referendum to issue bonds. Left to right—Dr. Ivan A. Booker, president of the Arlington County Council of P-TAs who presented the petition; William A. Early, county superintendent of schools; Sue Pilger, 6, of 6117 North 11th rd.; Robert W. Gammon, 3, of 4019 South 18th st., and Mrs. Edmund Campbell, board chairman, who received the petition.

The District Board of Education yesterday considered a half-dozen problems dealing with its administration of a dual school system.

Sewer Bond Vote Certain In Arlington

Izaak Walton League Files Referendum Petition in Court

A November 7 public referendum on issuance of $2,617,000 in bonds to expand Arlington County sewage treatment facilities was assured yesterday.

Petitions bearing signatures of 400 county voters who want the referendum were filed in Arlington Circuit Court by Paul O. Peters, a national director of the Izaak Walton League.

The petitions were circulated by members of the league's Arlington chapter. Only 50 signatures were needed according to law, and it now is mandatory for the Circuit Court to hold the referendum.

Late last month, the Interstate Commission of the Potomac River Basin, which has jurisdiction over the Potomac, threatened "to become an open sewer." Arlington now treats only about half of its sewage, according to county officials.

Called for in the petition was enlargement of Arlington's sewage treatment plant, improvement of pumping facilities, and installation of additional trunk sewers.

In its action, the Izaak Walton League by-passed the Arlington County Board, which on August 14 agreed to call for a similar referendum "within the next six months."

After the board's decision, the Interstate Commission, without naming names, indicated it felt that Arlington is not cooperating in abating stream pollution and is using delaying tactics.

But County Board members said the commission blast would not rush them to quicker action.

Member Alfred Frisbie said the board delayed action in order to determine whether the proposed bonds could be financed from sewer revenue instead of taxes.

And Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said that if Arlington residents wanted the sewage treatment bond issue settled in November, they would have to sign the Izaak Walton League petition. Directing the drive for petition signatures was Reynolds T. Harnberger, 2 past president of the league's Virginia division.

Theft of Girders Laid to Wrecking Firm Officials

Two officers of the General Wrecking Co., at Brentwood rd. and W st. ne., were charged yesterday with cutting down and peddling as scrap 26 tons of steel girders that didn't belong to them.

Charged with grand larceny and released on personal bond were Harry Milzman, 38, of 7923 14th st. nw., the vice president, and Jacob Hoffman, about 40, of 1306 Roxanna pl. nw., secretary.

James McIlvaine, a contractor who lives at 526 Valley lane, Falls Church, told police the girders were cut up with an acetylene torch on September 28 and 29, on a contracting job adjoining the wrecking company property, and were sold as scrap for a cent a pound. McIlvaine placed the value of the girders at $4000.

Milzman and Hoffman told police they thought the girders were their property.

Barrett Issues Urgent Call To Fill 255 Police Vacancies

An urgent call for recruits to fill 255 vacancies on the police force was issued yesterday by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

He said men between the ages of 21 and 30 (inclusive) are needed.

The vacancies are the result of an act of Congress which authorized the police department to go on a 5-day week. The 5-day week will require an additional 300 policemen.

P-TA Threatens Law Suit Over Crowded N. E. School

By Elsie Carpenter
Post Reporter

The District Board of Education yesterday considered a half-dozen problems dealing with its administration of a dual school system.

Two aspects of the shortage of classroom space in the Negro schools came to board attention.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning reported the five-room S. L. Brown Elementary School, 14th and Jackson sts. ne., now has an enrollment of 238 students and will have to go on part time until completion of an addition about the first of the year. As many as 50 children now are crowded into a single classroom.

Dr. Corning read a letter from the S. L. Brown Parent-Teacher Association threatening a lawsuit unless the board transfers some of the children to the nearby white Noyes School.

Lacks Authority
Dr. Corning said that in view of board rules requiring "separate schools" he lacks authority for such a recommendation.

The board delayed action on ordering the children on pending a study to determine if one of the schools for whites could be transferred.

The former Birney Elementary School, Nichols ave. and Talbert st. se., was officially designated as the Douglas Junior High School. The building will house junior high students until completion of the new Douglass building.

Seventy-two parents and 30 students from the Douglass School sat in on the meeting in what Gardner L. Bishop, president of the Consolidated Parent Group, described as "a silent protest" against assigning junior high students to an elementary building.

The meeting began during school hours. An official explained the children were not in school because parents had written notes declaring their absence an emergency.

The parents and children were brought to the meeting by the Consolidated Parent Group in 25 taxicabs.

Board President C. Melvin Sharpe appointed a special committee to look into the controversy that has resulted from the handling from the stage of Anacostia High School a mixed group of actors from the Sesquicentennial play "Faith of Our Fathers."

He named Dr. James A. Gannon, Adelbert W. Lee and Woolsley W. Hall, the new member of the board who was sworn in yesterday.

The committee was asked to find out on whose authority the actors were first invited to Anacostia, then turned away and whether Dr. Corning was quoted correctly in The Washington Post when, supporting the ban, he said: "Mixed groups do not appear in Washington schools."

Dr. Phillip Johnson, one of three Negro board members, said

Two Commanders Picked For Girl Cadet Corps

Lieutenant-colonels to head the two Girls High School Cadet Corps were appointed yesterday by the Board of Education.

Barbara Ann Guanco, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Anthony Guanco, 707 Taylor st. nw., was named for the white schools. A senior at Roosevelt High School, she specializes in science courses.

Maxine Beatrice Boyd, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie O. Boyd, 142 Bangor st. se., will head the cadets in the Negro schools. She is a senior at Armstrong High School, where she is taking courses in home economics.

Miss Guanco Miss Boyd

Meeting at Patterson School, the group expressed the desire to study the proposed before acting on. The group earlier voted to table motion to endorse the merger of the white and Negro teachers colleges.

Charles Price, chairman of the association's education committee, led a discussion of overcrowding in public schools.

Independent Dairies Revive Question of D. C. Milk Sources

The question of where the District's milk supply is to come from was raised again yesterday by Washington independent dairies in about the same words they used four months ago.

There were these developments: District milk from District-inspected farms, asked an end to importation, the independents received much of their milk from noninspected farms and said they ban drastically cut into their source of supply.

To meet the effect of a ban on importation, the independents plugged for equal standing of chemical sterilization. They said this would induce many of their producers who use chemicals to apply for District permits. Otherwise, the independents said, these farmers would ship to other markets.

Too Few Inspectors
Attorney John F. Hillyard said the dairies are again asking for an extension of the importation period because the Health Department hasn't enough inspectors to check all farms seeking permits by November 1. Seckinger indicated yesterday that he would probably oppose a further extension. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West has called importation illegal. "We're not in a frame of mind to recommend extending it indefinitely," Seckinger said.

The Health Department is short of inspectors, Seckinger admitted. But the delay in qualifying the several hundred farms which have sought permits to meet District regulations, he said.

The requested changes in regulation now under study would presumably enable many of these farms to qualify for permits.

Woman, 70, Hurt as Car Hits Tree

Mrs. Mary Williams Seriously Injured; Four Pedestrians Struck by Autos

Mrs. Mary Williams, 70, of 1115 42d st. ne., was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night after a car in which she was riding went out of control and struck a tree.

The accident occurred at 3:35 p. m. in the 1100 block of Kenilworth ave. ne. Police said the car was operated by Mrs. Mary A. Kendrick, 34, also of the 42d st. address, who has been driving only two months.

The older woman suffered fractures of the jaw, right elbow, left ankle and severe cuts. Mrs. Kendrick also was admitted to the hospital but her condition apparently was not serious. She suffered head injuries and knee and chest contusions.

Yesterday was a bad day for pedestrians, no fewer than four going to hospitals.

Gary Ellis, 11, of 3024 Wisconsin ave. nw., ran into the path of an automobile in front of his home at 8:30 a. m. as he raced for a streetcar loading platform on his way to school. He was reported in good condition at Georgetown University Hospital with head and chest injuries and face abrasions.

Police said the car was driven by James F. Davidson of 49 Observatory cir. nw., a teacher at George Washington University.

An automobile driven by Thelma Pickney, 31, of Newark, N. J., struck a streetcar platform at 6th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. at 1:35 p. m. Joan Cummings, 25, of Chicago, who was on the platform, was struck by a spring from the car. She was treated for possible hand and foot fractures at Emergency Hospital.

Police charged the driver with turning from the wrong lane. She forfeited $15 collateral.

Jane Engle, 27, of 1006 B st. se., was in Bethesda Naval Hospital with a possible fractured pelvis after she was hit by a car at 12:45 p. m. at 11th and Pennsylvania ave. se.

The car was operated by Alejandro de la Puente, 25, of 1701 16th st. nw., an attaché at the Peruvian Embassy, according to police.

Eugene White, 36, of 61 K st. ne., was struck by an auto at 1:25 a. m. at 1st and H sts. ne. The car, police said, was driven by Lloyd J. Van Sickle, 27, of 414 62d pl., Capitol Heights, Md. White was reported in good condition at Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of facial bones.

M. Sgt. Marcelo S. Delgado, 33-year-old soldier from the Philippines stationed at the Army's Edgewood, Md., chemical center, was killed when an automobile crashed into a culvert on U. S. 40 near Baltimore. Two other soldiers were injured.

Highlands Group Ask Release of Hager Report

The Washington Highlands Citizens Association voted last night to ask School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to release the Hager report which recommended the merger of Wilson and Milner Teachers College.

Meeting at Patterson School, the group expressed the desire to study the proposed before acting on. The group earlier voted to table motion to endorse the merger of the white and Negro teachers colleges.

Charles Price, chairman of the association's education committee, led a discussion of overcrowding in public schools.

Speeder Gets 3 Tickets for One Offense

The police department and the corporation counsel's office don't agree on whether a Washington policeman has the right to pursue a speeder beyond the District line. This is the incident:

On September 26, at 7:30 p. m., Pvt. William E. Nolan and Pvt. R. C. Jenkins of the Twelfth Precinct saw a speeding car at 1st pl. and Riggs rd. ne. They pursued and stopped the car on Riggs rd. in Prince Georges County, Md. The driver was Emil Halle, 43, of Avondale, Md., manager of Lacy's warehouse.

According to Nolan, Halle refused to accept a ticket charging him with speeding up to 50 miles an hour and refused to return voluntarily to the District.

The policemen called Prince Georges County police who charged Halle with speeding and disorderly conduct. Halle then accepted Nolan's ticket.

Trial Magistrate Robert W. McCulloch, at Hyattsville, found Halle guilty of the two Maryland charges but suspended sentence. Following a complaint, Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett ordered Capt. Clyde N. Strange, of Twelfth Precinct, to put Nolan on a foot beat and directed Inspector Archie W. Winfree to investigate.

Police officials said action is being taken to have the District traffic charge against Halle nolle prossed.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King said yesterday there is a reciprocity agreement that permits District policemen to arrest speeders they chase into Maryland and Virginia, or vice versa.

But, added King, the District policeman cannot make a legal arrest if the speeder slows to a legal speed as he passes into another jurisdiction.

Bus Drivers' Protest Strike Enters 2d Day; Thousands Stranded

Lincoln Museum Here Receives Civil War President's Shawl

HISTORIC SHAWL—A shawl owned and worn by Abraham Lincoln while President is presented to the Lincoln Museum by Mrs. Thomas Hamilton Breeze of Levittown, Long Island, N. Y. Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of the museum, accepts the gift.

The Lincoln Museum, 511 10th st. nw., yesterday received a shawl worn by Abraham Lincoln and a copy of his letter of appreciation to the person who presented it to him.

The shawl, a gift to Lincoln from Mrs. Annie Williamson of Edinburgh, Scotland, was presented to the museum by Mrs. Thomas Hamilton Breeze of New York. Mrs. Williamson was the wife of Alexander Williamson, who tutored the younger Lincoln children, William and Thomas. Mrs. Breeze is a grandniece of Mrs. Williamson.

A photostat of the letter written by Lincoln to Mrs. Williamson on July 29, 1864, was included in the gift. It reads:

"Madam—The shawl you sent me is just now placed in my hands by your kind and worthy son. I thank you for that pretty and useful present, but still more for those good wishes to myself and our country which prompted you to present it."

"Your Obedt. Servt., A. Lincoln."

The shawl had been returned to Williamson after Lincoln's assassination. It was turned over to the museum, where Acting Superintendent Frank T. Gartside accepted it on behalf of the National Capital Parks, under terms of the will of Williamson's niece, the mother of Mrs. Breeze.

Trial Mandatory Court Clamps Down on Auto Recklessness

Motorists charged with reckless driving after traffic accidents no longer will be permitted to forfeit collateral and dodge trial in Arlington County. Trial Justice Hugh Reid said yesterday.

Reid said he now has time to hear such cases in County Court because a recently appointed judge, Paul Brown, has relieved him of the juvenile and domestic relations case load Reid used to handle.

"Some reckless driving cases are too serious to be handled for collateral forfeiture," Judge Reid said.

He added that there are "some reckless driving charges in which driving permits should be taken." Under the old arrangement, motorists facing such a charge could simply fail to show up in court and automatically forfeit between $10 and $50, depending on the seriousness of the case.

Now, drivers so charged after traffic accidents must stand trial and face maximum sentences of 30 days and a $100 fine, as provided by county law if convicted.

Further, Reid said, State law sets a maximum jail term of six months and a top fine of $500 in such cases.

arrest if the speeder slows to a legal speed as he passes into another jurisdiction.

The view of Barrett is this: "It's against orders for our men to chase speeders into Maryland unless they have a reasonable ground to believe a felony has been committed and the person being chased is the one who has committed the felony."

New Light at Virginia Ave. And 26th Called Satisfactory

The new traffic light at Virginia ave. and 26th st. nw. appears to be working out satisfactorily. Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said last night after watching rush-hour traffic operations.

Keneipp said there was a slight snarl Tuesday night when the light first went into operation but he said there were other factors besides the light which contributed to the delay.

These, he said, included car breakdowns, blocking of intersections on Virginia ave. by cars making crossings, straddling of lanes by drivers, and failure of motorists to take full advantage of open spaces in traffic on Virginia ave.

Union Calls Dismissal Of Operator Unfair; 20,000 Commuters Caught by Surprise

The majority of 20,000 W. M. & A. bus riders will have to fend for themselves a second day today as a result of a protest strike by AFL drivers and mechanics.

The strike, voted unanimously by the local's rank and file late Tuesday night, left only 11 of 45 buses operating between Prince Georges County and the District during yesterday's rush hours.

The walkout, taking effect in yesterday's rain, caught most of Washington, Mariboro, & Annapolis commuters by surprise and thousands showed up late for work.

The employees—90 according to the union, 120 according to the company—struck in protest against the discharge of a driver, Norman Gibbs, of Maryland Park.

Gibbs was driving a W. M. & A. bus from Clarksburg, W. Va., to Washington, when the bus went off the road into a ditch near Pleasantdale, W. Va., and was damaged to the extent of $1500 last September 3, according to L. L. Altmann, company president.

He said he personally investigated the accident and dismissed Gibbs September 14 "in the interest of public safety." Gibbs had been with the company four months.

However, Charles Penrod, vice president of Division 1365, of the AFL Motor Coach Employees Union, charged Gibbs was unfairly dismissed. The union contends Gibbs was driving in the rain, and that the accident was due to conditions, and not to negligence.

For the past two weeks, a union grievance committee has conducted negotiations with the company with a view to resolving the dispute. Both sides apparently want to arbitrate the controversy, but they can't seem to agree on exactly what to arbitrate, and how to arbitrate.

The decision to strike was made by unanimous vote, according to Penrod. He maintains the strike is not a wildcat, but a legal walkout forced on the union by a violation of its contract.

Altmann said yesterday he will keep 11 buses running during the rush hours with non-striking supervisory help, and three buses during the non-rush hours. He said efforts will be made to run some buses to the line's 11th street downtown Washington terminal as well as to Barney Circle.

Capital Transit put 8 to 10 extra buses on runs from Barney Circle in an effort to handle the overflow yesterday morning and evening. A union spokesman said some of the strikers, using their own autos, picked up stranded bus riders and carried them to Capital Transit connecting points.

The W. M. & A. line services the Census Bureau, the Navy's Hydrographic Service and the Air Force base at Andrews Field, along with a score of Prince Georges County communities.

Jury Awards $15,000 For Traffic Injuries

Mrs. Virginia Chapman, of 437 60th ave., Capitol Heights, Md., yesterday was awarded $15,000 by a District Court jury for injuries she received in a traffic accident here in 1946.

The judgment was by default against Victor A. Sahulick, 629 4th st. nw., and Donald J. Dimmick, of Parkersburg, W. Va. In the collision, Mrs. Chapman suffered a fractured tibia.

New Aeronautics Bosses Share Honors at Party

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

DEL RENTZEL, newly appointed chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Administration and Mrs. Rentzel and the new administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration and Mrs. Donald Nyrop, shared honors at a reception given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Forte in the Burgundy Room of Wardman Park Hotel. Mr. Forte is assistant to the administrator of CAA.

Among guests at the fete were the Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer; the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Frank Pace, Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John Floberg, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Thomas W. S. Davis; Maj. Gen. F. L. Ankenbrandt, USAF, and Mrs. Ankenbrandt; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Harold McClelland, Brig. Gen. Charles Maylon, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moore, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Harold Stuart, and Col. and Mrs. Ralph Williams.

TO CELEBRATE THEIR twentieth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gallagher gave a buffet supper party last evening at their home for some 40 friends, many of whom they have known through the years.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Jr., George Livingston Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Coffin, William McComb, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Jack Logan, Anwar Niaz and George Holmes were among the guests.

THE SECOND OF TWO PARTIES was given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anthony Wadden, Jr., who were married in August. The party, held from 5 to 7 o'clock, included a number of friends from North Carolina and some from legal circles, as Mr. Wadden, Jr., is Assistant United States attorney at the District Court.

Mrs. Gary Hughes and Mrs. Jackson Davis of North Carolina were in the gathering, and Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, and Mrs. Harry Fulton were among those who poured. The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin, Mrs. James Souby and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fay were also guests.

MRS. ARTHUR VENNELL entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Westchester, where she makes her home, as a welcome back to Mme. Vladimir Rybar who has been in California for several months. Also among the guests was Mrs. John Brown Jacob of Alexandria, Va., who is back for a visit from Texas where Colonel Jacob is now stationed.

OFFICERS OF THE CAREER MANAGEMENT Division of the Adjutant General's Office gave a party last evening for their retiring chief, Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, and Mrs. Irving, and the successor to General Irving, Maj. Gen. Paul J. Mueller and Mrs. Mueller. The party was held from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. in the Officers' Club at Fort McNair.

Honor guests included the adjutant general, Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, and Mrs. Witsell; Lieut. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, assistant chief of staff G-1, and Mrs. Brooks; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William E. Bergin, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clovis E. Byers. Over 100 guests attended the party. Col. Frank Camm, assistant to General Irving, made the introductions, and Col. Robert H. Cushing was in charge of arrangements.

General Irving is leaving soon for the Presidio at San Francisco, Calif., where he will be deputy commanding general of the Sixth Army.

ROBERT F. LEFEVRE, special assistant to the director of purchase and stores, Federal Supply Service of General Service Administration, was guest of honor at a stag buffet supper at Wardman Park Hotel last evening, sponsored by S. A. Snyder, director of purchase and stores. Mr. LeFevre is retiring December 1 after 40 years in Government service.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Teen-Age Boy and Girl Are Caught in Crossfire Of Their Parents' Moody Antagonism That Developed A Few Years Ago, When Mother Became Emotionally Ill

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 19, happily awaiting my forthcoming marriage to a young man who has given to me the deeply satisfying and healing powers of unselfish love. My happiness would be complete if it were not that I am leaving my parents and brother Bill, 15, in a situation that is threatening destruction to our home.

For the last few years mother has been in emotional turmoil. She may be jovial and carefree for a short time, then she lapses into days of depression marked by tears, self pity and biting criticism of others, mainly dad. Maybe her moods are caused by menopause, but my brother and I can't help feeling that the proper attitude on dad's part would do much to relieve her anxiety. However, he won't cooperate.

Dad is a perfectionist who has little if any patience with the mistakes and easy-going ways of others. Mother, being very sensitive, is quite often hurt and exasperated by his endless fault-finding. Now, after 30 years' marriage, she feels she has swallowed so much pride and suppressed so many of her desires in an effort to please dad, that she no longer cares what happens to her life. Dad's reaction to this is an almost complete withdrawal from her.

My brother and I are cast in the precarious role of go-betweens, forced to listen to their tirades against each other. We've tried "peace talks" with them individually, to no avail. Mother has asked dad's forgiveness countless times. His only apology is, "You make me behave as I do." He refuses to admit any fault on his part, and seems now to have no regard for anyone's happiness, not even his own.

Bill and I see two sides to the story and we don't blame either one exclusively. But we are at a loss to know how we might instill in them a willingness to work toward a happier, more satisfying life together. Can you help us? Please answer soon.

E. B.

DEAR E. B.: Obviously your father is rather worse off than your mother. By that I mean he is emotionally sicker than she, and he has been neurotically ill for a longer time, indeed nearly all his life, it seems.

When you find a perniciously, fault-finding, perfectionist individual such as he, who can't face the thought of flaws in himself, you are up against a person whose psychological constitution was severely damaged in early life, and whose wounds are so painful, even today, that he reacts like a bear with a sore foot when helpful examination is proffered.

This type of damage is done by the mother, or mother-proxy, usually, operating in ways that keep the child on the anxious seat from babyhood, tense with a sense of being unwanted, and yet baited by the theory that possibly he may earn favor by "model" behavior that satisfies his idol or tyrant, as the case may be. The child acquires the perfectionist complex as a result of fighting despair by trying desperately to pacify persons who won't be pleased. He comes to despise himself and hate humanity, and yet if there is strong stuff in him, he keeps on struggling for "merit" via perfectionism.

"As the twig is bent, so the tree inclines," and it may have been a martinet parent, zealous for discipline, who gave your father a wrong start in human relations. Or a neurotic mother, using a blend of self-pity and threatening coldness to subdue intimates while excusing her faults, could have "mal-adjusted" him for the long haul. In any case, the present crisis finds him misbehaving destructively, and the fact that your mother's melancholy is geared to revolutionary quarrel with him, after 30 years of trying to please, suggests that he broke her down to his sick level.

Furthermore, the fact that your mother has recurrent sunny spells and has asked your father's forgiveness countless times, to which he reacts with childish fives and complete withdrawal, shows that her heart is right and the will-to-recovery still resurgent; whereas he seems morbidly ready to smash everything, now that she is in partial collapse.

It seems your father is a "hater," unconsciously, and your mother has been weakly subordinate in relation to him—weak in the sense of assuming it was good economics to humor his nagging, or that this was the way to promote emotional security for herself in marriage. Had she been tough-minded in challenging his crankiness from the first, she might have weaned him from his morbidity. As matters stand, you can't help them. It's a case for a specialist, if anybody. And if your father won't see a psychiatrist, your mother should, because she's still open to reason, I think.

Gaslight Days Are Over But Lamp Problems Linger; Here's One Involving Brass

LIGHTING PROBLEMS TODAY CAN'T hold a candle to those of the old kerosene and gas-light times. Trouble, however, is still with us. For example:

DEAR ANNE:

How, oh, how, do you clean a brass lamp once the lacquer has started to wear off?

MRS. J. E. H., Alexandria, Va.

Your question coincides almost exactly with a similar one from Mrs. F. H. T., of Arlington, Mrs. H. The first thing I'd like to ask you both is: Are the lamps really brass?

They may be solid brass if they are expensive ones, or antique. If so, your problem is relatively simple. Take off the lacquer with lacquer thinner and shine the lamp with brass polish.

However, if yours are like most "brass" lamps popularly sold nowadays, they're made of a base metal with a very light plating of brass, topped by lacquer. They look pretty and last well if carefully handled, but once the lacquer is damaged and the brass tarnishes underneath, there's not much you can do about it.

A light polishing will help temporarily, but vigorous or repeated polishing will simply remove the thin brass plating (as well as more lacquer and leave you nothing for your trouble but base metal. Such lamps can be replated but unless they're very fine ones, it's not worth the cost. Best way to perpetuate their life is just to treat them with respect always and a light dusting occasionally.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you or any of your many readers know anything about the process of starting a hobby of making picture frames at home. I would very much appreciate any suggestions on the details of necessary machinery, materials (their availability and where obtainable) and mechanics or processes involved.

Jane M. Shannon, 4932 Hillbrook Lane.

Can anyone with a similar hobby give a bit of advice?

DEAR ANNE:

After many trial-and-error finishes on the "scraps," we are still unable to obtain the soft, lustrous, antiqued, rather "bronzed" look on a white pine spice shelf. Manufacturers of the Early American cobbler's benches, desks, etc., do not give away their "secret" for the same finish. Can you make a suggestion?

Daily Reader, Charlottesville, Va.

Here's a method that should give a nice, mellow "bronzed" finish on the pine. However, I'd advise you to continue in your "trial-and-error" way with this on a scrap to see just how many coats it will take to give you the shade you like.

Mix one part orange shellac with two parts white shellac. Thin the shellac with an equal amount of alcohol. Brush on bare, smoothly sanded wood. Let dry thoroughly, then rub down with very fine steel wool. Apply a second coat this way—and a third—and a fourth, rubbing down each in the same way, until you get the color you like. Finish with a last coat of varnish, and a rubbing with fine steel wool or powdered pumicestone and linseed oil on a piece of felt. (Varnish will give you a more durable final surface than the shellac.)

Fashion Flaunts Fake Fur—A Chic Sham

By Evelyn Hayes

NEWEST OF THE NEW—and much fashion fun—are the fake fur fashions being worn this year. We're not talking about cheap furs that try to pass for their more elegant relations. We're talking about furs that aren't furs at all—that are flagrant fakes concocted out of fabric.

In a year when fashion's look of elegance is competing with soaring taxes and prices, this is the way smart gals are managing to achieve a luxury look for practically a pittance.

These fashionable fakes run the style gamut from a. m. to p. m. At Erlebach's, for example, there's a smart oxford gray flannel suit that would turn the head of many a Redskin rooter on Sundays. The skirt is sleekly slim, topped by a fingertip-length reversible coat made of matching gray flannel on one side and tangerine "fur" on the other. To go with it, there's a knockout ribbed jersey turtle-neck top in blending tawny tones.

THERE ARE WHOLE SUITS, too, which are blatant copies of that most fabulous of fashions—the fur suit. One such is pictured. Another, at Woodward & Lothrop, teams a cardigan jacket with knitted waistband and cuffs with a slim skirt—all in bogus broadtail. This is especially good in gray. Lansburgh's junior department is also making much of fake fur suits. One has a slick, sleek belted cardigan jacket that manages to look casually elegant. This comes in terra cotta, amber, navy blue and the more conventional black and brown.

For those who really want to practice deception, there's a coat at Lansburgh's—a fingertip shortie that's a dead ringer for Persian lamb at 10 paces. Faced with broadcloth, it gives a many $$$$ look for less than $50.

At Woodward's you'll find all kinds of things in fake fur. There are fake broadtail stoles in the neckwear department that will dramatize many an evening costume. For juniors there are white lusher-plush cape stoles to wear for evening and late day.

IN SPORTWEAR, THERE are phony pony pants (really knickers) that would look wonderful topped with a dark jersey. Some of our favorite fakes are the elegantly casual robes of chenille, cut and patterned to look like leopard. We like the three-quarter wrap which could double for fireside lounging by teaming with a pair of brown velveteen satin or velveteen slacks.

One thing about these fashions. They're not for the faint-hearted. They must be worn with an air and a haughty look of "Of course, they're sham, but they're chic!"

BOGUS BROADTAIL—This sleek suit of fake fur tops a stem of a skirt with a flaring jacket with smart big-cuffed sleeve. In taupe or navy blue. The jacket on its own can go anywhere a fur jacket would. At Woodward & Lothrop's

MOCK ERMINE—This cape stole of "ermine" with its mink-tailed (they're real!) scarf is flung over one shoulder with all the casual abandon usually reserved for its regal prototype. At Woodward & Lothrop's. This and the "fur suit" will be shown tomorrow in Woodward & Lothrop's fashion show for Ki-Wives at the Shoreham

Diet Can Be Pleasure

By Ida Jean Kain

PSYCHOLOGY, APPLIED to dieting makes it a game. One pleasantly plump gal who is always thinking up interesting ways to make slimming easier, hit upon a psychological plan that works wonders, not only for her but for her friends.

At a luncheon one day, she heard an overweight lament that the only time she is really happy is when she is eating. This set our practical psychologist to thinking about how much time is spent eating . . . about an hour and a half a day. She concluded that over-eating at mealtime is the quickest way to take most of the joy out of all the other hours of the day . . . for it is not fun to be burdened with extra fat.

Now let's apply nutrition science to that thinking and make diet a pleasure, even at meal hours. Say you come to the table HUNGRY . . . you can hardly wait to soothe the turbulent inner woman. All right . . . start with a hot bouillon. Take the first few spoonfuls fast, then sip it more slowly, savoring the flavor. A hot liquid at the beginning of the meal is always a help, for it lets you relax and eat more slowly instead of eating fast to fill the void.

FOR SOMETHING to chew on, have crisp celery with the bouillon. Not just a single piece, but a fourth of the whole stalk. Cut right through the heart of it—this gives you substance. Or eat the salad with the bouillon course, the way the movie stars do. Just the act of chewing appeases hunger. And when you are chewing on something that contains few calories, that's all to the good.

Then you are ready for the main course . . . and it can be hearty. Have a serving of lean meat, fish, or chicken. Make it a habit routinely to avoid gravy . . . at home or when dining out. When giving the order, specify no gravy. Have a generous serving of meat . . . all you can eat or afford. And the main course should include a couple of vegetables—one can be a potato, if you wish. Use only half a pat of butter on vegetables, and delete dressing from the salad to cut fat calories.

When it comes to dessert, again use psychology. Think this way . . . by not taking a rich dessert, you'll soon be your slim, attractive self again! Eat fresh fruit . . . sip your black coffee . . . and call it a meal before you overeat. That's the way to be normal weight and happy all your waking hours.

Experiment Linda

Beauty Lies Right at Tip Of Teen-Ager's Fingers

With day of Linda's six-day beauty routine.

By Ann Lawrence

HERE'S A LOT more to be learned from Linda's beauty tips for teens than the question of using or not using colored nail polish.

Linda's query about her nails concerned only the use of polish: "I would like to use nail polish, but I'm not sure it looks good." Let's say that colored nail polish... a fragile-colored pink... looks well on teen's nails.

Your hands and nails are scrupulously clean at all times.

Your hands are smooth. You're not too young to start using a hand lotion after every washing to keep 'em white and soft.

You're never guilty of biting your nails.

Ill down on a single one of the rules and colored nail polish will only call attention to your hand's defects. (And if those seem stringent, just remember that they hold equally for grown-ups.)

HOW TO KEEP your hands and fingers in tip-top condition? Rub them often, the hands, thumbs, around and under the nails. Use a special white nail polish to bleach away stains and remove any caked dirt from under the nails. Several times a week, wrap an orangewood stick bottom, moisten it with a little oil... one which contains enough lubricant to keep your nails and cuticles from drying out... and work around the base and base of each nail. Push the cuticle back, but gently, not to reveal your half-moons. This will keep you from getting hangnails and will help get rid of any you already have.

Never let chipped polish stay on your nails. Remove the polish from all ten nails or repair the chipped one immediately. Removing your polish, dip a piece of cotton in a remover (which contains oils beneficial to both nails and cuticles), hold on your nail for a second or so, then pull the cotton right off, taking the polish with it.

APPLY POLISH, take a woman who set the fashion for and actually created the first colored polish: Use a small amount on your brush, sweep it from running onto the cuticle. Apply it with a light stroke, working from the base of the cuticle to the end of the nail. Use cleansing tissue to remove polish from the nail. Two coats of polish gives the best results, but be sure the first coat is dry before applying the second.

As a final touch, massage a rich hand cream into your hands, paying particular attention to your knuckles. Really rub it in... and use a dab of the cream to keep them looking chubby.

If you're not wearing polish, buffing your nails. Ten times each nail, always in the same direction, for a high sheen and auster that is vastly better.

Hands that are lovely to have and to hold... come from careful care. And teentime is the time to start caring.

TOMORROW: Now is the Time for Good Grooming Habits. Copyright, 1950, Spades, Inc.

LINDA LEARNS the essentials of a good manicure: 1. Filing each nail to an oval shape with a good emery board, stroking always toward the center.

2. When she does not use polish, Linda is taught to buff her nails, 10 times to each nail, for a high sheen.

3. The chalk pencil is applied to whiten her nails.

4. A light, rosy polish is applied. With very little polish on the brush, the color is stroked on from the base to the tip of the nail.

5. The final touch: a rich hand cream massaged into the skin to keep it soft and white. The result: nails that are scrupulously clean, delicately tinted.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Earl Is a Statler Man, With No Reservations

Most Washington newsmen like Earl Brown, in spite of the fact that he's a publicity man. Earl is always in there pitching for the Statler Hotel. But he's such a nice guy, we don't really mind.

The other day, for example, I think Earl outdid himself. An operation at Gallinger Hospital was being televised in color to a group of doctors attending the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society—being held in the Statler, of course.

When the camera focused on the patient, the reporters couldn't help chuckling. Across the poor guy's chest was a Statler towel.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three black kittens, two gray." (Falls Church 4255.)

"Very nice 8-week-old kittens." (Johnson 3-5907.)

"Three-month-old male kittens; will deliver." (Trinidad 2453.)

"Black male cocker spaniel, AKC registered, for somebody with large yard and heart to match." (Decatur 6379.)

"Three very nice kittens, daughters of a 'male' cat we got through your Give-Aways." (Emerson 5552.)

"Part-Persian 8-week-old kittens." (Woodley 1130.)

"Healthy 1-year-old dog, mostly spitz; we're moving into an apartment. And another thing—go ahead and scold me for not clipping the name of the vocational school that repairs radios, but I've forgotten it. Can you print it again?" (Arlington 6354.) (Editor's Note: Why not print it again? I get several phone calls a day asking for it. It's Chamberlain Vocational High School. Call them on the District switchboard, National 6900.)

"Five-week-old pups, mixture cocker and toy collie." (Lockwood 5-1812.)

"Beautiful kittens." (Atlantic 6153.)

"Twenty-three Pillsbury extra-value premium coupons." (Franklin 0439.)

"Housebroken, affectionate tiger kitten." (Union 7744.)

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Henry F. Unger of 4930 S. Dakota ave. ne. says this department should "put up a yowl" about the fact that the public may no longer use the Library of Congress in the evenings.

Unfortunately, no amount of yowling will provide the funds that an economy-minded Congress failed to appropriate.

Library Administrator John Anderson had hoped to get a supplemental appropriation of $100,000. When it failed to come through, he had no alternative than to cut off book and reference services to the public after 5:45 p. m. on weekdays and after 1 p. m. on Saturdays. The cuts are first cousins to those forced on the Post Office Department by an economy budget.

Where this penny-pinching will lead us is hard to say. Instead of writing letters or curling up with a good book, our generation seems destined to spend its time watching ancient cowboy movies on television—or perhaps whistling at the strip-teasers who are the current rage in area night spots.

Book publishers may well view this situation with alarm. Either of these newer pursuits is calculated to ruin a man's eyes in short order.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:
After reading your column for gosh knows how long we certainly were glad to find out what you looked like (in yesterday's ad describing the various Washington Post writers).
Mrs. Donald R. Mead

Dear Mrs. Mead:
Believe me, you still don't know what I look like.

Bill
P. S. I've begged our Promotion Department not to use that picture, but the best I could get was a promise they'd keep it out of circulation so long as I behaved myself. That day I was a bad boy. I misspelled "fore-seable." Imagine, six vowels in such a short word, and four of them "e's!"

HE-SHE JOKE

The current edition of the telephone company's magazine, "The Transmitter," carries the quip:

He: Why does a woman say she's been shopping when she hasn't bought a thing?

She: For the same reason a man says he's been fishing.

BITTER HALF

The Yankees had just whipped the Phils. 1 to 0, and I turned off our TV set.
"That," I commented, "is what I call television drama at its best."

"Maybe so," mused the lady of the house, who is still a bitter-end National League rooter, "but isn't the plot wearing a bit thin by now?"

"Listen, Susie, they're playin' OUR SONG!"

Kremlin's Intelligence Suspect

By Drew Pearson

It is now possible to get a reasonably accurate picture of what the Kremlin had in mind when it invaded Korea and the impact our victory has had on Kremlin thinking. This picture comes from intelligence information pieced together from various parts of the world and, while its accuracy is not copper-riveted, it is probably reasonably correct.

At the time of the Korean invasion, the Kremlin was convinced that the United States would not resist. This conviction came partly from the Soviet Embassy in Washington and was unwittingly confirmed by the top United States adviser to South Korea, Col. John E. Baird, through his Korean mistress, Kim Soo Im. Through the unsuspecting Baird, the Korean Mata Hari learned of various secret directives, all showing we had written off Korea.

Subsequent events indicate that Colonel Baird may have done his country a great favor.

For, banking on American inertia and the difficulty of mobilizing the United Nations, the Kremlin had prepared a series of "revolts" in other areas to follow the Korean attack — Formosa, Tibet, French Indo-China, civil war in North India, an invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece, an Azerbaijan attack on Iran, and a drive to push the allies out of West Germany.

If these could be accomplished, the Kremlin planners were convinced that a semi-Communist government in France and Italy would fall and the history of Czechoslovakia would be repeated.

What upset the Kremlin timetable was the sudden decision of President Truman to order United States troops into Korea plus Secretary Acheson's well-planned maneuver to get U. N. Security Council approval for our counter-attack. From two reliable sources, we know that the Kremlin was dumfounded.

The 14 men in the Politburo had never expected anything like this, and the Soviet Embassy in Washington was ordered to report immediately as to what went wrong.

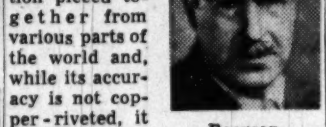

What will happen next is hard to predict. However, two factors seem worth examining. Because the Kremlin's intelligence was so bad regarding Korea, they appear to be worried about trusting intelligence reports from other countries.

Also, it appears certain that the current peace front that Malik and Vishinsky are waging at Lake Success is aimed to lull us back to appeasement.

The last thing the Russians want is an alert, heavily armed U. S. A. Hence, the friendlier speeches, the rumors of a Stalin-Truman meeting and the talk that Vishinsky will attend an American football game.

Meanwhile there will be riots and exploratory probes in Germany, probable uprisings in Azerbaijan, plus Communist successes in Indo-China.

If we appease, the Kremlin will go back to its old bulldozing. If we continue tough, there should be a bona fide change in Kremlin policy—though this would be a miracle.

Pearson

but he has one weakness—his family.

On the same day President Truman sent his special message to Congress warning American cities to prepare for atomic attack, he left the vitally important job of preparing these cities against attack in the hands of a charming socialite who got his job only because he was Symington's brother-in-law.

Jerry Wadsworth, now acting head of civilian defense, is a tall, amiable, teddy-bear sort of individual, who at the age of 50 has made no career for himself, but happens to have two potent relatives: (1) his father, GOP Congressman James Wadsworth of New York, and (2) his brother-in-law, Democrat Stuart Symington, Copyright, 1950, Bell Syndicate, Inc.
